WILSON PROMISES TO HELP FILIPINOS GET INDEPENDENCE

Secretary Baker Reads His Letter to Delegation Making Formal Demand.

PLEDGES HIS OWN SUPPORT

NEW CONGRESS TO DECIDE

Governor General Harrison Expresses Belief That Past Opposition Has Disappeared.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Philippine Islands today, through a delegation of forty prominent Filipinos headed by Manuel Quezon, President of the Filipino Senate, asked for complete independence. They presented a memorial from the Filipino Legislature to Secretary of War Baker, who not only assured them of his agreement with their views, but read to them a letter written by President Wilson to him in which the President, with foreknowledge of the visit and its purpose, expressed the hope that it would gain the desired end.

President Wilson's letter to Secretary Baker under date of March 3 was as follows:

"Will you please express to the gentlemen of the commission representing the Philippine Legislature my regret that I shall be unable to see them personally on their arrival in Washington, as well as my hope that their mission will be a source of satisfaction to them, and that it will result in bringing about the desirable ends set forth in the joint resolution of the Legislature approving the sending of the commission to the United States?

"I have been deeply gratified with the constant support and encouragement received from the Filipino people and from the Philippine Legislature in the trying period through which we are passing. The people of the United States have, with reason, taken the deepest pride in the loyalty and support of the Filipino people.

"Though unable to meet the commission, the Filipino people shall not be absent from my thoughts. Not the least important labor of the conference which now requires my attention is that of making the pathway of the weaker people of the world less perilous—a labor which should be, and doubtless is, of deep and abiding interest to the Filipino people.

"I am sorry that I cannot look into the faces of the gentlemen of this mission of the Philippine Islands and tell them all that I have in mind and heart as I think of the patient labor, with the end almost in sight, undertaken by the American and Filipino people for their permanent benefit. I know, however, that your sentiments are mine in this regard and that you will translate truly to them my own feeling."

Secretary Baker's Promise.

In receiving the Filipino delegates, Secretary Baker said:

"My first duty is to convey to you an expression of the President's regret at his absence from Washington at the time of your visit. When it was first suggested that the mission should come to the United States, the President foresaw his absence and caused me to suggest that the visit be deferred in the hope that he might be personally here when the mission came and have an opportunity to meet you and hear your views and express his own. It has turned out, however, that his engagements in Europe required his return there and so he is unable to be in Washington now to receive you. He left, before he went, a letter addressed to me which he asked me to read to you.

"We have long been fortunate in the representatives whom you have chosen to send to us. Those who are here now are all men of temperate judgment, fine aspirations, and have worthily represented the Filipino people. This larger group of men has come charged by the Legislature of the Insular Government with this mission of visiting the United States, and making known to the people of the United States the fact of the Philippine progress, the growth and development of political capacity in the islands, the spread of education, and the natural growth of aspirations for political independence. You are to make all this known to the people of the United States.

"For a long time the Philippine people had been discussing among themselves their aspirations. As soon as the United States became involved in the great enterprise of the world war, the Philippine people with fine self-restraint abandoned the discussion of that question as inopportune at the time, and threw all their energies and their resources into the common weal with the people of the United States, so that throughout the entire period of the war the relations between the people of the United States and your people have been those of cordial co-operation and confidence and growing appreciation and esteem.

"When the United States went into the Philippine Islands, it set up a military government. What has been going on is the rapid progress and development of a new civilization in the Philip-

Trotzky Tells Russian Fleet To Go Out and Attack Allies

LONDON, Saturday, April 5.—Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevik Minister of war and Marine, has ordered the Russian Baltic fleet to put to sea and attack the Allies, threatening to have all the crews shot if they disobey the order, says the Mail.

STORM OF PROTEST MAY SAVE PARADE

Secretary Baker Expected to Withdraw Opposition to March of 77th Division.

APPEALS SENT TO CAPITAL

Senators Wadsworth and Calder Intervene, Asking Permission for Proposed Reception.

While no definite word was received in this city from Washington, it was learned unofficially yesterday that as a result of the widespread protest over the Adjutant General's announcement that the 77th Division probably would not be permitted to parade, the War Department was now inclined to modify its attitude and allow New Yorkers to see their boys march up Fifth Avenue. Meanwhile, the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops, the Home Auxiliary Association of the 77th Division, representatives of local Selective Service Boards, and prominent individuals took steps to bring pressure on Secretary of War Baker and officials of the War Department to allow the same parade privilege to the 77th Division as was accorded to the 27th.

Senator James W. Wadsworth and Senator William M. Calder took a hand in the situation and promised to use their influence in inducing the military officials to change their policy. Senator Calder sent the following telegram last night to Secretary of War Baker:

> New York State has witnessed the triumphal return of her splendid National Guard Division. They represented, in the main, the men who for years had given their lives to military preparedness. They were the volunteers. The 77th Division, drafted from every corner of the great metropolis, representing every nationality on the face of the earth, the great majority of whom had never before taken any part in military matters, are entitled to the same reception. My judgment is that failure to accord them the same consideration will be regrettable from every standpoint. The parade itself would be a fitting recognition of the spirit displayed by these men in their willingness to serve their country nobly and valiantly. I am certain that I voice the sentiments of every citizen of New York when I earnestly urge that the War Department issue orders for the parading of this division.

Committee Is Confident.

In making public a telegram which the Mayor's Committee sent last night to Secretary of War Baker, Grover Whalen, Secretary of the body, said that the committee was confident that the 77th would be allowed to parade and that the reception plans were being made in the belief that the order would be modified. He pointed out that in the case of the 27th Division permission for the parade was not given by the War Department until a few days before the event. Mr. Whalen said if the War Department declined to change its attitude, the committee would arrange to have the parade held after the men were demobilized. At any event, the relatives and friends of the 31,000 metropolitan boys need not fear that they would not see them march.

The following telegram was sent:

> In the name of the people of New York City, the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops earnestly requests you to make no decision on the question of review and parade of returning divisions or units resident in this city until after official representatives of the city have had an opportunity to confer with you.
> The people of the City of New York have patriotically supported the Government with men, material and money during the world's crisis, and we believe that every opportunity should be given to them to show their continued patriotism, especially in the coming Victory campaign. Proper opportunity to exhibit appreciation of our returning troops will assure continuance of our patriotic fervor.

Senator Wadsworth held a conference yesterday afternoon in the Hotel Manhattan with John H. Halleck, Chairman of the 189 Selective Service Boards of the city, and Frank Harvey Field a member of the Executive Committee of the boards. After discussing the new situation which had arisen in the reception plans, Senator Wadsworth assured the two draft officials he would impress on Secretary of War Baker today that nothing short of an official parade would satisfy the people of New York.

"This parade must be held, if there is any way to hold it," Mr. Halleck said. "We don't intend to see these men whom we sent away to war with appeals to patriotism brought back like whipped dogs. They have sacrificed blood to crystallize patriotism and love of country which we instilled in them when they were sent away. Now that they are returning the least we can do is to acknowledge the spirit of Americanism born while shells were bursting around them.

"People do not know that when the PARIS, April 2.—Published statements of the spread of Bolshevism in Germany are circumstantially confirmed by the reports of allied experts who have been sent there to investigate internal conditions. I have just examined a batch of these reports, made by British investigators, and am able to cable many details. Americans have been conducting similar investigations, which fully confirm the British.

As these investigations have been made by trained allied specialists, their reports and conclusions may be accepted as having no program of bias, and they constitute the first big, thorough survey of the situation inside of Germany by different individuals gathering data from different sources.

The conclusion to be drawn from the reports is that Germany is probably going Bolshevist for the following reasons: (1) lack of food; (2) unemployment, due to the shortage of raw materials; (3) delay in making peace; (4) definiteness of the Spartacide plan, with its abundant funds and Bolshevist propaganda; (5) the despair of the people and their broken discipline; (6) new ideals with Lenine compared to the Messiah, as opposed to (a) allied imperialism, and (b) the League of Nations, which lacks concreteness and directness of appeal.

All agree that the Bolshevist movement is formidable and growing, while the Government gets weaker. The chief leaders are foreigners, mostly Russians. There are two principal classes, namely, idealists and adventurers, who have everything to gain and nothing to lose by bringing about a state of anarchy. They are in close and constant communication with Russia, whence they receive enormous sums of money.

Dangerous Idealist Group.

The members of the idealist group belong to the intellectual and aristocratic classes, and are more dangerous than the adventurers. They have considerable learning and eloquence, and surround themselves with a halo that appeals to the intellectual "snobism" characteristic of German mentality. To this group belong Ehrich Muhsam, Franz Pfemfert, Karl Hirsch, Johannes Becher, Rudeger Berlet, and Dr. Lewiss. Karl Radek is a mixture of the two, with an almost religious belief in Bolshevism and a conviction that Lenine has a mission to the world.

The Spartacides are of the same breed, with the same aims, as the Russian Bolsheviki. The phrase, "the dictatorship of the proletariat" frequently occurs in the speeches and literature of both. They describe themselves as Communists. The great strength of the Spartacides lies in the fact that theirs is the only party in Germany with a definite political program. They preach and believe that communism alone will bring happiness to the world. The level of oratory at the meetings attended is higher than would be expected. The general line of their argument runs about as follows:

"Substitute our ideals of the Communistic State, and there will be absolute equality for all. Germany is starving and impoverished, betrayed, and deceived by former leaders. (This sentiment is always applauded to the echo.) She has not only been thoroughly beaten, but has earned the hatred and contempt of the rest of the world. The new Government is no better than the old. The political tyranny

Hoover Now Fears Exhaustion of Germany's Food Supply

PARIS, April 4, (Associated Press.)—The food difficulties in Germany were by no means solved by the signing of the food agreement. Tonnage is unavailable to move the required supplies, and the available grain stocks are so short that it will probably be impossible to furnish the full amount specified in the agreement for some time.

Herbert C. Hoover, Director General of the Interallied Relief Organization, estimates that he can furnish Germany 180,000 tons of grain during April, but if the German estimates that the German grain and potato stocks will be exhausted before June are correct, Mr. Hoover expresses the belief that it is questionable whether food enough can be supplied to tide Germany over until the next harvest, particularly as German ships, in which the bulk of the food must be transported, cannot land cargoes in Germany within six weeks.

KUN IN BAVARIA; GERMANS ALARMED

Fear That Munich Will Openly Embrace Bolshevism and Spread Convulsion.

PEOPLE FLEEING FROM CITY

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company. By Cable and Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 3, (via Copenhagen.)—The prophecy that Bolshevism would be introduced into Germany from Hungary by way of Austria and Bavaria receives confirmation today in a dispatch to the Deutsche Tageszeitung from Munich reading:

"Bela Kun, dictator of the Hungarian Bolshevist Republic, arrived in Munich yesterday with a large suite in a saloon carriage reserved for him. His car was attached to the so-called Entente train. While yet on Austrian territory, Bela Kun's identity was established beyond all doubt by the railway officials."

Another short message from Munich simply states that a large Bolshevist delegation arrived there yesterday in a reserved car from Hungary.

In Communist circles in Berlin it is stated that the Hungarians were invited by the Munich Soldiers' and Workers' Council, and it is considered almost certain that the Executive Committee of the Berlin Soldiers' and Workers' Council, which recently sent hearty congratulations to Bela Kun on the success of the Bolshevist revolution in Hungary, knew and approved this visit to the Bavarian capital.

Munich Near Bolshevism.

Bela Kun and his emissaries arrived at a most opportune time for their purpose. Munich is quite ripe for the final shift to Bolshevism. Württemberg, Baden, and the rest of South Germany are seething with the strike fever, Spartacide riots, and the hunger nest. In Pforzheim, Baden, hunger typhus has killed thousands within the last month. The hospitals are overcrowded, and graves cannot be dug quickly enough.

Munich is the hotbed of Bolshevism in Germany, or will be within a few days. Even before the Hungarians' arrival the Munich authorities had imitated Hungarian methods in the most approved style. The inhabitants and owners of large houses were compelled to open them to the unemployed, who now, with their families, make themselves at home in the salons and boudoirs of Munich high society.

Many wealthy persons have already fled from the Bavarian capital, and the railway stations are crowded with furniture that cannot be transported for lack of engines and coal. Thousands of Munich citizens who refuse to recognize mob rule have decided to emigrate to South America. They have formed the South American Emigrant League and, following the general fashion, immediately elected an emigrant "council" to find ways and means of reaching the promised land.

COBLENZ, April 3, (Associated Press.)—Official cognizance has been taken by the Third Army of the increased spirit of enmity shown by civilians against Americans in the occupied area. Thursday's intelligence summary says of this condition:

"There is considerable feeling against our strict enforcement of the civilian circulation regulations. * * * This is especially so with reference to the circulation on the left bank of the Rhine between the several occupied territories."

Regarding Bolshevism and the opinions of civilians in the occupied area the summary says:

"The general idea is that Bolshevism will die of its own accord, and satisfaction is expressed that it cannot make headway in the American zone. While recognizing that the inhabitants owe the quiet in the region to the American troops, it is evident that the population has no really friendly spirit for our soldiers."

ITALIANS MAY WITHDRAW

Disquieting Report That They Will Quit the Conference Because of Fiume Dispute.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless and Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 4.—From outward indications, at least, the Peace Conference situation has not been improved by the circulation of disquieting rumors concerning what is taking place in the councils of the so-called "Big Four." There were reports from several sources—some of which appeared to be authoritative—that the Italian delegation had decided to return home on account of its dissatisfaction over the disinclination of the majority of the allied Governments to give Italy complete control of Fiume. Premier Orlando declined to attend yesterday's session of the "Big Four" because the territorial claims of the Jugoslavs, which are in conflict with those of Italy, were heard. In some quarters the reports of the intention of the Italians to withdraw are regarded as propaganda in favor of Italian territorial aspirations.

In the face of reports of this character some progress seems to have been made, although there is no apparent justification for the very general understanding that the proposal to have one peace treaty with all enemy nations has been abandoned and the optimistic statements that peace is near.

A great advance in settling the troublesome question of reparations has been made by the acquiescence of the French in the proposal to have the amount Germany must pay fixed at approximately $50,000,000,000. The reparational sections of the treaty will give Germany between twenty-six and thirty years in which to pay this amount on condition that $5,000,000,000 be paid in cash and the rest under provisions by which Germany shall contribute a percentage of her surplus annually.

It is also provided that the damages shall be assessed under seven categories of violations of international law, and it is estimated that $50,000,000,000 will cover all such cases.

Gloomy Feeling Over Outlook.

April 3.—In spite of assurances of progress made toward peace, the gloomiest feeling prevails in practically all the groups connected with the adjustment of war problems. On every hand it is admitted that the necessity for haste will compel compromises that are likely to bring dissatisfaction and future trouble. Nobody is satisfied with the outlook.

The situation has resolved itself to this: So much time has been wasted in futile discussions and disagreements in the last three months that virtually nothing has been done to restore the world to normal. Meanwhile the social and economic conditions in Central and Eastern Europe seemed to go from bad to worse. Bolshevism began to make progress, and unrest has become widespread.

The demobilization of allied forces encouraged the enemy countries to believe the Allies would be unable to enforce harsh peace terms if a show of resistance were made. Although warnings were repeatedly given that unless these conditions were checked the whole world might again be thrown into a ferment, the peace conferees failed to harmonize their differences.

Now the situation has reached a pass where these same conferees have concluded that the peace terms must be agreed upon with the least possible delay in order to avert the threatened worldwide trouble. A quick adjustment means hasty, even snap, judgment in determining the many grave issues; and it is felt very generally that therein lies the future danger.

The adjustment reached concerning the reparations to be demanded of Germany illustrates the character of

Peace Treaty May Be Ready for Signing Wednesday; London Hears Big Four's Work Nears End

PARIS, April 4, (Associated Press.)—The opinion was expressed tonight by a responsible British authority that the peace treaty would be ready for signing by Wednesday.

LONDON, April 4.—The Paris correspondent of The Daily Telegraph wires that he is able to state on the highest authority that by Sunday a complete agreement will have been reached by the Council of Four.

"We are in a position to anticipate that within a comparatively few days the stage will be reached in the Peace Conference which will permit Premier Lloyd George to return to England," Sir Robert Stevenson Horne, the Minister of Labor, said today at the reassembling of the Industrial Council.

REDS IN ALLIANCE BY SECRET TREATY

HELP OF ARMIES PLEDGED

Ebert Government Said to Contemplate Using Agreement to Threaten Allies.

GENEVA, April 3.—I learn from an absolutely reliable source that a formal secret treaty of alliance exists between the German Spartacides and the Russian Bolsheviki.

This treaty was concluded Jan. 5 between Karl Liebknecht, as the leader of the Spartacides, and Karl Radek as the plenipotentiary of the Russian Soviet Republic. The act of signing took place in a little bare room occupied by Rosa Luxemburg on the top floor of a tenement in the proletarian quarter of the city. Rosa Luxemburg herself, to whose influence the agreement between Liebknecht and Lenine was chiefly due, also affixed her signature to the treaty.

By the terms of the treaty Lenine undertook: First, to recognize Liebknecht as President of the German Soviet Republic second, to furnish important funds for the Spartacide propagandists; third, to place specially trained agents at the disposal of the Spartacides; fourth, to order the Soviet armies to take the offensive and cross the German frontier, to support simultaneous Spartacide arisings in Berlin.

Liebknecht, on his part, pledged himself: first, to establish a Soviet Government in Germany immediately upon his advent to power; second, to observe faithfully and put in practice all the teachings of Lenine's doctrine; third, to raise a Red Army of 500,000 men to be placed under the supreme command of the Commissary of War at Moscow.

The murder of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, which occurred soon after the signing of the treaty, disarranged the concerted plan of action. The Red Army did, indeed launch an attack in spite of Liebknecht's death, but the Spartacides, deprived of their leaders, were defeated in Berlin, and Trotzky's forces gave up the attempt to invade Germany to bring them aid.

It is a significant circumstance that the alliance between the Spartacides and the Bolsheviki is of a recent date. In the days when Joffe was the Soviet Ambassador in Berlin, the Spartacides were by no means on intimate terms with the Bolsheviki, whom they distrusted on account of the secret relations of the Russians with von Hertling's Government. Admiral von Hintze, then Foreign Secretary, and Gustav Stresemann, the National Liberal leader, were daily guests at Joffe's well-supplied table, from which even Independent Socialist leaders, such as Haase, were rigidly excluded.

Only after Joffe's expulsion from Berlin was Radek sent by Lenine to negotiate with Liebknecht.

The existence of the treaty concluded between the ill-fated Spartacide leader and Lenine's envoy is known to the present German rulers. It is assumed in well-informed quarters that Ebert's Government, in order to intimidate the Entente, is even toying with the idea of ratifying it, and that this strange document was produced during the recent negotiations between Count Brockdorff and the Independent Socialists.

PLEDGES BRITAIN TO UPHOLD FRANCE

Lloyd George Says His Country Intends to Maintain Ally's Security.

Premier Denies His Attitude Has Been One of Opposition to Proposals.

PARIS, April 4.—Premier Lloyd George, in a statement to the Petit Parisien today, denies the report, generally prevalent, that he is an obstinate opponent of the guarantees asked by France against a renewed attack by Germany.

"Dissensions?" the Premier asked. "Do you seriously think they can ever exist between our two countries?

"There has been some discussion; but is it not from sincere discussion that a final agreement must emerge between France and England? Our understanding has remained complete and absolute. Englishmen did not come to fight by the side of the French to give your country merely relative security during a limited period. No, they mean France to have absolute security in the future.

"You know what sacrifices England has made, and you know well that England does not regret them. She is ready to make fresh ones if it becomes necessary to guarantee the peace and independence of France.

"I have seen the scourge of war twice loosed on France by Germany. We do not intend that there shall be a third time, and should it be fifty years hence, France again will find England by her side with all her wealth and power, for, mark well my words, the wild beast must be mastered.

"It is mastered at present, but if one day it raises its head ready to spring, it will find itself again faced by France and England united in brotherhood."

GERMANS TELL WILSON REDS HAVE FIELD HERE

Cite Big Trusts and Fortunes in Their Warning to Adhere to Peace Principles.

BERLIN, April 3, (Associated Press.)—Leading ethical, philosophical, and religious societies of Germany have addressed an appeal to President Wilson giving warning against a disregard of principles to which Mr. Wilson has pledged himself and which, they say, induced Germany to lay down her arms.

The appeal declares that "if the Germans are driven to desperation they would rather become Bolsheviki than slaves." It charges the Czechs and Poles with anticipating the conclusions of the Peace Conference and violating Wilsonian principles. The Allies, it sets forth, are "not only condoning the acts of the Czechs and Poles, but are supporting those nations."

It is maintained that the Allies provoked anarchistic conditions in Germany by refusing to relax the blockade.

In discussing the possibility of a revival of militarism the appeal says:

"Only one thing could again weld the Germans of every State into a warlike power—the continuation of the policy of hate and annihilation that has been pursued by the Allies."

Mr. Wilson is warned that the United States, "with its great private fortunes and billion-dollar trusts" is a "fertile field for communism," and it is suggested that wealthy Americans "had better support the League of Nations."

Hope Held Out of Return to Work in a Few Days.

HAS A COMFORTABLE DAY

But Strict Regimen of Rest and Quiet Is Insisted Upon.

HOUSE SITS IN "BIG FOUR"

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 4, 7:30 P. M.—President Wilson is supposed to have an attack of influenza. On account of what was diagnosed as a bad cold he was kept in bed today by Admiral Grayson, his physician and naval aid. This evening there were indications that he had contracted influenza in a mild form.

It is said by those close to the President that his illness is not serious, and it is expected that he will be confined to his room for a few days only.

Colonel House took the President's place at the meeting of the "Big Four" today, the others present being Premiers Clemenceau, Lloyd George, and Orlando.

PARIS, April 4, (Associated Press.)—President Wilson is confined to his bed with a cold, which in a statement given out at the Paris "White House" early today was characterized as "severe."

Reassuring news from the President's bedside was sent to the peace delegates this evening, although the news indicated that his state of health was such as to make it advisable that he remain in his room at least for tomorrow.

Study of the case has caused Admiral Grayson to reach the conclusion that the President is not suffering from influenza, but that the severity of the cold is such that his patient will require careful watching.

A bulletin concerning his condition was issued at 6 o'clock this evening. It said:

> President Wilson's condition is virtually unchanged, but he had a comfortable day and secured needed rest.

The President's condition is regarded by Admiral Grayson as sufficiently serious to warrant insistence upon strict compliance with the orders given early in the day against any unauthorized intrusion into the sick room.

With Colonel House in the place of President Wilson, the Premiers met this afternoon at the War Office, but agreed to meet tomorrow at the President's house for the purpose of consulting him, if his condition should have sufficiently improved, on any question that might arise to make it necessary to do so.

The proceedings of the council today were informally communicated to the President.

The illness of President Wilson caused numerous wild rumors to circulate in the city, and not even the delegates themselves were immune from them. Colonel House heard that the President was ill with influenza, but Admiral Grayson personally assured both him and the Premiers that Mr. Wilson merely had a bad cold. He warned them, however, that the utmost care must be exercised to prevent it from getting worse.

King Albert of Belgium, who met with the Council of Four at its forenoon session, sent to the President an official expression of regret at his indisposition. When the King talked with him yesterday, the President appeared to be well. Mr. Wilson himself did not appear to feel a warning of his approaching illness. It was during the latter part of his meeting yesterday with Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George that the cold developed. The President's voice began to grow husky enough to cause comment from the Premiers before the adjournment of the conference.

After 6 o'clock his condition became such that he could scarcely talk. Admiral Grayson saw him immediately after the conference adjourned and ordered him to bed.

Members of the President's household, his friends, and newspaper correspondents were advised of his condition, but in the hope that a night's rest would bring definite improvement the correspondents were requested not to make public what was regarded as only a slight indisposition.

While Admiral Grayson hopes to break up the cold within a short time, he has made no prediction as to its probable duration. The President has a fair degree of fever, although just what his temperature is has not been revealed.

Were it not for the fact that he has been under a terrific strain and deprived of his usual amount of exercise, his illness would be the cause of little worry.

Since his return the President's work has been enormous, and he has been unable to take more than an occasional walk at odd intervals either with Mrs. Wilson or Admiral Grayson. Golf has been dropped from his schedule, and an automobile drive now and then about the city has been his only form of recreation, beside the short walks.

Admiral Grayson has been constantly watching the President for signs of a breakdown, especially since the two days on board ship when Mr. Wilson was slightly ill.

Other physicians have not been called in for consultation, and up to midday Friday the services of no trained nurses had been solicited; but Mrs. Wilson has been always within reach of her husband, doing practical work and assisting in the care for him. Admiral Grayson is always near the President. His treatment for the patient for the most part consists of the requirement of absolute quiet and rest.

The President's appetite today was good, but at luncheon he was limited to oyster soup and a light entrée.

The American Executive, however, is sick enough to make him indifferent to reading. He appears to be quite content to rest, and sleeps lightly from time to time.

After the forenoon session of the council today the members on departing renewed their wishes for the President's rapid recovery.

The members of the Council and representatives of the allied Governments have made solicitous inquiries as to his condition.

WHITE HOUSE NOT ANXIOUS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Joseph P. Tumulty, the private secretary to the President, received a cablegram today from Rear Admiral Grayson, the President's personal physician, saying that Mr. Wilson had taken a severe cold, which was confining him to his bed in Paris. But the statement was authorized at the White House that the message from Paris indicated that the indisposition of the President was not to be regarded as serious enough to cause any real anxiety.

The President has had colds of this sort from time to time, and Admiral Grayson has always been able to combat them successfully by having him go to bed the moment he is threatened with them. Under this treatment Mr. Wilson has always rallied quickly and never has been indisposed as much as a week at a time, even when suffering from his severest colds.

At the White House confidence was expressed that the President would be out in a day or two at the longest.

SAYS ERZBERGER ASKED LARGE ANNEXATIONS

Drastic German Peace Terms, Drawn Up in 1914, Attributed to Present Peace Envoy.

BERNE, April 3.—Mathias Erzberger, Chairman of the German Armistice Commission, was the author of a document written in 1914 asserting that Germany's peace terms, if she won, would include large annexations and indemnities, Herr Landauer, a representative of the Munich Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, charged in a speech at Augsburg, Bavaria, according to a dispatch to the Frankfurt Zeitung.

Landauer, who was speaking at a meeting in memory of Kurt Eisner, the late Bavarian Premier, said he had a copy of the document. He at first refused to give the name of the author except that the latter was still a member of the Government. Finally, he said that the person to whom he alluded was Herr Erzberger.

Among the peace terms mentioned in the document, Landauer said, were:

Annexation of Belgium, French Normandy, and several towns on the southeastern coast of England.

Annexation of the territories on the eastern frontiers of Germany which have since become separate States.

Establishment of a large German colonial empire.

Payment of a war indemnity calculated to cover Germany's expenses during the first ten months of the war, as well as the entire German debt before the war.

Herr Landauer said that these terms were approved in principle by General von Falkenhayn, General von Moltke, and Admiral von Tirpitz.

OCCUPATION OF ADALIA.

Italian View That It Should Be Preliminary to Larger Move.

ROME, April 3.—The Idea Nazional, commenting on the proposed Italian occupation of Adalia in Asia Minor, says:

"We are glad that Italy can immediately represent the decisive element of order asked for by the population of Adalia, but we think that this effort of hers would not be worth while. An actual landing would not constitute success if everything should be limited to Adalia, and if Adalia should not be considered as a base for important operations in Anatolia more equal to our needs and corresponding to our position as a great Mediterranean power."

PREDICTS SENATE WILL RATIFY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, Democrat, today predicted that when the League of Nations question is placed before the United States Senate for action there will be very few votes in that body against the League Constitution.

"There is talk of ratification of the peace treaty and adoption of the League of Nations 'with amendments,'" said Senator Walsh. "There can be no ratification 'with amendments,' for that would be rejection. If any amendments are made they will have to be made by the Peace Conference in Paris.

JUNTA PLAN HOPELESS

"Big Three" Should Be Directing Work of Others, Not Busy Over Details.

By G. H. PERRIS.

PARIS, April 3.—Serious observers of the different types of thought and interest agree in feeling lively anxiety about the Conference. Day after day the chief statesmen continue their secret palavers. Day after day the subjects that were supposed to have been virtually settled reappear on their agenda papers. A thin stream of news of their discussions trickles into the press, to be eked out with plentiful comment, which is generally biased and often poisoned. The peace bulletins inexcusably repeat the vices of the war bulletins.

The public (I speak particularly, of course, of the French public) urgently needing peace, and very imperfectly understanding the complexity of the issues, seeing the Council of Four apparently lost in details, and the rest of the delegates apparently idle in the outer courts of the Areopagus, wax more and more impatient. For rather different reasons, most of the delegates share this irritation.

What is the matter with the Conference? Many writers have sought to answer this question. Generally the reply has been either that the leaders have fallen into mistaken methods of work, or that they have lost touch with the fundamental necessities of the case, that is to say, the case of the particular country to which the writer belongs.

Perhaps the search is not pushed further from fear of economic mischief on the part of the enemy. On the contrary, I think it is only by going further that we can find the real disorder, and that when that is recognized and remedied, no fear of enemy bluff will remain.

For this reason, I venture to state frankly my own impression of the real trouble is that in arbitrarily turning the Conference into a junta, the three major statesmen have lost something of the force of the democratic brotherhood of alliance which alone could give life to the respective formulae they keep on repeating to each other in their private chambers.

Neither in the idealist formulae of Wilson nor in the national slogan of Clemenceau is there any vapidity, except what it will receive from the united will of the associated peoples, by which the war was won.

No paper scheme by which the Rhine frontier of France may be made secure or the absorption of Germans in Danzig may be minimized by a corridor will have any living force, unless it is understood and backed by the associated peoples.

It is now generally expected that in all allied countries there will be disappointment when the program of reparation indemnities is published. Why? Because the leaders lacked the courage to tell their constituents at the outset what was possible and what not.

The League of Naions is the one sure accomplishment of the conference, because, although imperfect, it has been canvassed throughout the world and has an irresistible popular will behind it. The territorial problems, on the contrary, have been left to the obscure play of interested manoeuvres that would have nonplused the three archangels.

Our very human Big Three, though they have never dared to face the scandalous anomaly of secret treaties, imagined that with their own hands and over their own table they could quickly reduce this chaos to order. It was a mistake, not only of method but of spirit. Their proper function was twofold: on the one hand, to direct their colleagues of the Conference in working out the details of all these problems; on the other, to keep the waiting world continuously in touch with the work, so that Allied opinion would be always mobilized in its support. These twin oaks would have reacted favorably, each on the other, and would have carried with them the best of guarantees, not only for the immediate but for the further future.

Will it be said that such territorial, financial and military problems cannot be publicly discussed? In fact, they are constantly discussed; but with the inaccuracy and bias which would have been avoided if the spirit that ruled over the opening of the Conference had continued to preside over the debate. When one reads the Parisian press today, one may judge whether mystery is not more dangerous than any such risk of indiscretion.

SEE ITALIAN "SQUEEZE PLAY."

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune.

PARIS, April 4.—The Italian announcement that the Italian Peace Delegation will leave Monday for Rome, where it will arrange a separate peace with Austria, is regarded here as a "squeeze play" to force the allied and associated powers to grant Fiume to Italy instead of making it a free port.

Through the previous threat to quit the Peace Conference the Italians made the other powers switch on the Fiume allotment, and succeeded in taking the port away from the Jugoslavs and forced a decision to make it a free port. Now the Italians are trying to force the Allies' hand again by threatening to pull out unless Fiume goes to them. The Italians promise to grant the Jugoslavs free commerce through the port, but insist that it be an Italian city.

Under the circumstances it is considered certain that the allied and associated powers will give way. An impassé in the Peace Conference now might be the first step toward entirely disrupting the proceedings and breaking up the conference entirely.

TO FORM PEACE AGENCY.

Foreign Committee of German Assembly Will Deal with Treaty.

BERLIN, April 3, (Associated Press.)—The Majority Socialists and the Centre and Democratic parties in the Assembly agreed today on the establishment in the immediate future of a Committee on Foreign Affairs along lines similar to the American Congressional Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The Committee is to handle financial affairs and the details of peace at the present time, and later will have charge of the problems concerning the League of Nations and other matters involving Germany's relations with the rest of the world.

ASKS LEAGUE AMENDMENTS.

League of Free Nations Association Seeks Changes in Peace Treaty.

The League of Free Nations Association, which for some time has been holding weekly meetings at which the proposed draft for the League of Nations has been discussed by prominent speakers, has sent several cablegrams to the Peace Conference at Paris, as a result of these meetings, urging amendments to the proposed treaty. This was announced last night from the headquarters of the association.

The amendments asked by the association, and cabled abroad are:

1. An amendment to Article II., to provide for an adequate and democratic representation in the body of delegates of the different political groups within the various States members of the League.
2. Amending Article VII. so as to make possible increases in the membership of the Executive Council without resort to an amendment to the covenant.
3. Modifications of the covenant to provide definitely for the entrance of Russia and Germany into the Executive Council, dependent upon the maintenance of democratic and stable Governments.
4. Adding to the second paragraph of Article XI., which reads as follows: "It is hereby also declared and agreed to be the friendly right of each of the high contracting parties to draw the attention of the body of delegates or of the Executive Council to any circumstance affecting international intercourse which threatens to disturb international peace upon which peace depends," the following words: "Including oppression or persecution of racial, religious, or cultural minorities in any State."
5. Adding to Article XXIII., which provides for public registration of treaties, the following: "The sittings of all international agencies shall be public and open; the body of delegates, the Executive Council, and all other bureaus and agents of the League of Nations shall keep complete records of their proceedings. These records shall be printed and published by the Secretary General, and shall at all times be open to public scrutiny and examination."
6. Modification of Article XXVI. so as to make amendments to the covenant easier.

PROGRESS IN PEACE COUNCIL

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Indemnity Claims Scaled Down.

France and Great Britain demanded full payment for the expenses of the war, with estimates of that cost, ranging from $120,000,000,000 to $200,000,000,000. The American position was that the reparation should be confined to the actual damages inflicted by Germany, and the amount of these demanded should be measured by Germany's ability to pay. The compromise provides that the amount to be paid by Germany shall not be named in the treaty, but that an Interallied Commission shall fix each year for twenty-five years the amount Germany is able to pay.

It was admitted today in the best informed quarters that in the effort to make peace quickly even the disputed boundaries would be fixed only tentatively in the peace treaty, leaving the permanent adjustment to be made later by mutual agreement or by arbitration, or some other method. This is likely to leave the boundary questions in a delicate and dangerous situation.

It was suggested today in a highly responsible quarter that, on account of the inability to effect even a temporary compromise, the dispute between Italy and Jugoslavia over Fiume and the Dalmatian Coast would be left unadjusted. Perhaps, it was suggested, the peace treaty might provide for the continuance of the present control, which is full of dangerous possibilities, until a permanent settlement was possible some time in the uncertain future.

Bolshevism the Chief Worry.

Bolshevism worries most of the peace conferees more than anything else. They do not know what attitude to assume toward it. The fact that Bolshevism has obtained control of the Hungarian Government and has practically defied the attempt of the allied nations to impose the new armistice terms, has made the Paris peacemakers sit up and take notice of the possibilities of this latest form of the Russian example.

The French were all for sending a military expedition to control the Hungarian Government and counteract the Hungarian menace, and put forward General Mangin to command it.

The announcement last night that General Smuts, former Boer leader and now a member of the British War Cabinet, has been chosen to go to Hungary, has brought a storm of criticism from the French, who see a sign of weakness in the failure to send Mangin, who is purely a military man. Smuts, it is explained today, is going as a civilian, not as a soldier; and it is broadly hinted that the purpose of sending him is to determine whether the part of wisdom dictates that the Bolshevist Government at Budapest shall be recognized by the Allies. Recognition, it is contended, would be a first step in the direction of recognition of the Bolshevist régime in Moscow.

French Fear a Compromise.

As the situation stands the effort to bring peace quickly by compromising great issues, coupled with the fact of Bolshevism and the diplomatic advances toward the conquered enemy nation to be undertaken by Smuts, has produced much dissatisfaction, part of which is voiced in the French press, but much of which is expressed privately and emphatically in other allied quarters.

In the frequent attempts to get action on the big questions in the last several months, President Wilson and Prime Minister Lloyd George have stood shoulder to shoulder. Their position in most cases has coincided, and it is perplexing to those who have been watching the Peace Conference developments closely, to hear of anti-British sentiment being worked up in the United States on the ground that England is America's enemy.

One of the curious developments of the Peace Conference is the manner in which Lloyd George has advocated the Wilson principles. Some of his British brethren here say that the Prime Minister has been converted to idealism, and out-Wilson's Wilson in insisting on the Big Four adhering to the fundamental peace policies which were outlined in the President's fourteen points.

BELGIUM REQUESTS TWO-BILLION LOAN

Albert Wants 10,000,000,000 Francs to Redeem Marks Deposited in Belgian Banks.

PARIS, April 4, (Associated Press.)—Belgium's case has been laid before the Peace Conference by the most distinguished advocate Belgium could have chosen. King Albert has been in Paris for the last three days, and in numerous conferences with the representatives of the great powers he has outlined to them the needs of his country and told them of the steps that must be taken immediately if Belgium is to be restored.

King Albert has had long conversations with President Wilson, Colonel House, Premier Clemenceau, and Premier David Lloyd George. These conversations led up to his appearance before the Council of Four today.

A member of the Belgian peace delegation told The Associated Press today that, shorn of all its diplomatic niceties, what King Albert told the council might be summarized thus:

The time of promises has passed. If Belgium is to live the council must act.

The Associated Press is able to state that three questions of vital immediate importance to the re-establishment of Belgium, financially, economically, and politically, were discussed. The first question was the immediate advance to Belgium of about 10,000,000,000 francs; the second, the exportation to Belgium from England and the United States of raw materials, and the third the cession to Belgium of the left bank of the Scheldt River and the Limburg Peninsula.

The first item represents the value of German marks left in circulation in Belgium. After the departure of the Germans the Ministry of Finance sent out an urgent call to holders of the marks to deposit them in the banks. The amount was estimated to be about 2,000,000,000, and it had been the Government's intention to redeem them at the par value of 1 franc 25 centimes. Belgium was not prepared for the avalanche of marks that resulted. Eight billion marks passed through the banks' windows into the vaults. The banks were unable to redeem this amount of paper, and depositors received receipts stating that a certain amount of marks was held to their credit until such time as financial arrangements could be made to reimburse them.

The payment of an immediate indemnity by Germany was relied upon to enable repayment for these deposits. No indemnity has thus far been received. Depositors cannot draw against these credits, with the result that some 10,000,000,000 francs are idle, as the banks are paying no interest on such deposits.

The importation of raw materials is said to be indispensable to the economic salvation of Belgium.

King Albert made an excellent impression before the council today, but is understood to have received no promises.

Pensions for disabled soldiers and for widows and orphans will be included in the bill to Germany for reparation. The Peace Conference leaders have decided that such relief to individuals for losses and sufferings during the war will be a proper charge under the armistice provisions.

The reparation of losses to the civilian population will constitute a very considerable proportion of the $50,000,000,000, the amount of the reparation bill as now approximately estimated. In the case of Great Britain the pension bill will probably constitute the largest item of the total claim. It is understood that the United States will not lodge any claim under this head, Americans being covered by the American soldiers' insurance system.

The Council of Four has appointed a committee consisting of L. P. Loucheur, French Minister of Reconstruction; Edwin Samuel Montagu, British Secretary for India, and John W. Davis, American Ambassador to Great Britain, to put into definite form proposals for the solution of the reparations question. These will be passed upon, in principle, by the Council, it is reported from French sources.

The aspirations of Denmark are regarded favorably by the Peace Conference, The Matin says. Indications are that Denmark will recover the part of Schleswig-Holstein which she desires.

The conference, the paper adds, has decided to return to Denmark without delay the natives of Schleswig-Holstein who served in the German Army and were taken prisoners by the Allies.

A delegation of Danes from the region south of the contemplated Schleswig-Holstein tentative boundary line has arrived in Paris and has requested that a plébiscite be held to determine the status of the Danes in the district in question. The members of the delegation say that their arguments were not heard when the Boundary Commission was summoned to consider the matter.

The Czechoslovak question was again discussed by the Council of Four today.

The council resolved, for the sake of facilitating its work, that the decisions of the commissions should be sent directly to those drafting the treaty.

Colonel House at the close of the day said that he was pleased with the progress made, and Captain André Tardieu of the French delegation also expressed satisfaction.

NOSKE PLANS TRAINING FOR ANOTHER WAR

PARIS, April 4, (Associated Press.)—The proposed limitation of German armaments has at present for the Germans largely an academic interest, as the dependable forces which the State and private enterprise have been able to raise by an incessant advertising campaign and offers of good pay and bonuses to volunteers do not reach the lowest figure mentioned in reports as to the size of the army to be allowed Germany by the Peace Conference, according to the latest advices from German sources.

The Socialists, in addition, retain their old objections to militarism and are not enthusiastic about even the proposed popular militia on the Swiss model.

An exception to the general Socialist attitude is furnished by the Socialist War Minister, Gustav Noske, who has expressed the opinion that in case of an unfavorable peace, which he anticipates, the army must as quickly as possible be brought to a state of the highest efficiency for a new war.

A beginning should be made, in the belief of Herr Noske, with the development of the militia and army side by side, with which should go a campaign for the hardening and strengthening of the people by altering the school courses so as to give the coming generation more time out of doors and the encouragement of open-air exercises and sports.

Herr Noske, who expressed these views to German newspaper men in defending the bill for a provisional army introduced at Weimar, qualified his attitude by expressing the hope that some form of a League of Nations in which Germany would have an equal footing would ultimately be evolved and some arrangement for Alsace-Lorraine and other problems be reached with which the Germans could be content and which would obviate the necessity of a new war.

Should, however, France take Alsace-Lorraine temporarily, said Herr Noske—adding that he used the word temporarily intentionally—a reaction against this would necessarily come, in which case Germany, with its population of 60,000,000 and the prospect of another 10,000,000 from German-Austria, would have a great advantage in numbers over France, the population of which, he figures, has receded about 36,000,000.

Herr Noske's views are not believed to be shared by the masses of his compatriots, notably the Socialists, being repulsive to the average German in the midst of the morning after "moral katzenjammer" over militarism.

Senator Johnson Says People Think Too Much of Foreign Problems.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Senator Hiram Johnson of California issued a statement today asserting that during the months since the armistice Americans had been "afflicted with a mental far-sightedness" which caused them to see all the ills of other countries yet to forget the ills of their own. He declared that it had become a reproach almost to think in terms of America first. His statement said in part:

"It is time for Americans to awake. Five months have passed since the armistice, since we did the job for which America entered the war. During all this time we've been afflicted with a mental far-sightedness which enabled us to see the ills and the possibilities of Finland and Poland, of Courland and Lavonia, of Esthonia and Lithuania, of Czechoslavia and Jugoslavia, of Armenia and Syria, and even of the Hedjas of Arabia, but which has prevented us from seeing or caring for the ills and the problems of our own.

"Five months now, after the end of the war, we have a million and a half of men in France and Germany; American boys in Siberia under Japanese command; American boys in Northern Russia under English command, and what this means can be told by the fathers and mothers of Detroit from the letters of their sons.

"Five months after we have made the good fight and won, England is acquiring a world monopoly of oil; has the cable and radio monopoly, and is reaching for the world's commerce; Japan is in some undisclosed manner endeavoring to establish a foothold upon our border; Korea is in revolt, only held in subjection by ruthless cruelty; China is seething, and is publicly notified by Japan that if she publishes the secret treaties which place her in subjection Japan will punish her.

"Our demobilized soldiers ask only justice and work and get neither. Our ordinary business lags, and because of the Government's inactivity or indifference cannot resume its normal condition. Unemployment increases daily and foreign agitators play upon distress and discontent.

"In the State from which I come our bean industry and our barley growers face dire disaster because they patriotically responded to the demands of the Government and are now abandoned while foreign nations have actually profited from their sacrifices.

"And we are under the spell of a world hypnotism, unconscious of what is transpiring about us."

LUDENDORFF TELLS SECRETS OF WAR

STILL WANTED TO FIGHT

BERLIN, April 4, (Associated Press.)—One of the Berlin newspapers today prints extracts from the forthcoming book written by General Ludendorff, former First Quartermaster General of the German army.

General Ludendorff says the defeat of the Germans on August 8 (in the Franco-British offensive near Albert and north of Montdidier) finally resulted in the losing of hope by the Germans for a military victory. Conferences were held with Chancellor von Hertling, Admiral von Hintz, the Foreign Minister, and Field Marshal von Hindenburg on August 14, 15 and 16, and there also was a meeting of the Crown Council, "at which I clearly stated that the war could no longer be won militarily," says Ludendorff.

At the beginning of September the Supreme Army Command again invited von Hertling and von Hintze to Spa, Ludendorff adds. Hertling excused himself from attending on account of his advanced age. In these discussions the situation on the western front was again depicted as very grave, according to Ludendorff.

"I opposed Baron Burian's step for peace on account of its vagueness, but favored an immediate peace step in some other form," Ludendorff says. [Burian was the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, and constantly was sending out peace feelers.]

"The Supreme command," Ludendorff continues, "had an idea of mediation by Holland. On Sept. 8 renewed discussions between von Hintze, von Hindenburg, and myself, were followed by a report to the Kaiser. Von Hintze was the first to allude to a change on internal grounds. I then spoke as follows:

"'We must now act energetically on the armistice and peace questions. The entire situation in Europe may undergo a change to our disadvantage. The western front may at any time have to withdraw further, and the worse our military situation becomes the harder will be the conditions.'

"On the arrival of President Wilson's note I came to Berlin and submitted the following questions to von Hertling:

"'Firstly, is the German people willing to fight on? Secondly, what is the German Government's estimate of the Bolshevist danger, which I take very seriously? Thirdly, is the Ukraine necessary for our provisioning?'

"The second note to President Wilson was also sent in agreement with the supreme army command. The answer to it clearly showed that President Wilson no longer had the power to oppose the Entente's demands. For the reply to the note the Chancellor again invited me to Berlin.

"The military situation was unchanged. In the West, however, there was a consolidation, and this circumstance, in conjunction with the declaration made by the War Minister that he could within a measurable period give the supreme command 600,000 men, made the situation appear such that we need not surrender unconditionally to President Wilson.

"I emphasized the necessity of replying to the note in a dignified tone, with due regard to the empire's interests. An abandonment of the U-boat war could not be considered. Admiral Scheer (former chief of the German Admiralty's Staff) spoke in the same sense. This conception also continued to be held for some days in the War Cabinet. Dr. Solf, (former Foreign Minister,) however, requested Count Wolff-Retternich and others to create a more yielding atmosphere. Success fell to Solf. The U-boat war ceased and the path to capitulation was trodden. Von Hindenburg immediately protested against this and proposed an appeal to the nation.

"It was clear from President Wilson's third answer that our opponents wanted to destroy us. Von Hindenburg and myself had no doubt that if we must fight we could still continue the war for some months.

"The utmost exertion of strength might, perhaps, have had a sobering effect on the enemy peoples and brought us a bearable peace. On Oct. 25 von Hindenburg and I submitted this idea to the Kaiser and later to Vice Chancellor von Payer. We gained the impression that the Imperial Government no longer was willing to fight, but was ready to accept the hardest conditions.

"On the 26th I wrote my resignation, but at von Hindenburg's request I did not dispatch it. Immediately afterward I learned that the Supreme Command had been violently attacked in the Reichstag on account of its order relative to the third Wilson note. This order had been rejected by me with the injunction, 'Let the matter become clear.' Only as the result of clumsiness did the order get placed before von Hindenburg, and then it was out without my knowledge."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 3, (via Copenhagen.)—Dr. Karl Helfferich, late Vice Chancellor and one of the principal advisers of William II., following Ludendorff's and Tirpitz's example, is writing his reminiscences.

His book will be entitled "History Immediately Preceding the World War." It will begin with an account of the negotiations concerning the Bagdad Railway and Germany's policy in the Near East, with which Helfferich was so fatally connected, and will end with Aug. 4, 1914.

NO 'SECRET PROTOCOL,' DECLARES WILSON

Cable Denying Reed's Assertion Is Read by Bainbridge Colby During St. Louis Speech.

ST. LOUIS, April 4.—Declaring the League of Nations covenant the greatest instrument against war ever presented for the world's adoption, Bainbridge Colby of New York, in an address here tonight, arraigned opponents of the plan.

Attacking a statement of Senator Reed that the proposed covenant contained a secret protocol and that Germany, in all probability, was already in it, Mr. Colby made public a message he had received from President Wilson denying this. The message reads:

"Statement that there is any secret protocol connected with or suggested in connection with the League of Nations is absolutely false.

T. P. O'CONNOR PLEADS FOR IRISH SETTLEMENT

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune.

LONDON, April 4.—"Every way which would lead to a League of Nations is barred for the British Empire by the figure of embittered and enslaved Ireland. Until the Irish question is settled fairly and to the satisfacton of the Irish people there can be no real friepdship between England and the United States. Those two great peoples are necessary guarantors of the League of Nations. Unless they guarantee it the League is nothing but an unreal vision. And today, because of Ireland, there is more bitter and widespread anti-British feeling in the United States than ever since the civil war."

Thus spoke "Tay Pay" O'Connor this afternoon in the House of Commons in what Ulster members referred to scornfully as "an old-fashioned full-dress Irish debate." United States Ambassador Davis sat listening in the gallery.

Mr. O'Connor said that never in his life of more than seventy years had the feeling against England in Ireland been so bitter as it was today. Ireland was no longer an English question but an imperial and international question, he said. He urged that Ireland had a perfect right to ask consideration at the hands of the Peace Conference in Paris, and read extracts from President Wilson's speeches to show that the Irish case complied with the principle of self-determination for small nations.

Today, in the Mansion House at Dublin, the Sinn Fein Parliament of the so-called Irish Republic met.

TAFT FOR CLOSED SESSIONS

He Sees an Advantage in Peace Envoys Speaking Their Minds.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—Speaking at a dinner here tonight former President Taft said he believed that the demand for open proceedings of the Paris Peace Conference came principally from newspaper correspondents who had not fully judged the difficulties in the way of such a course.

As a member of the National War Labor Board, he said, he saw the wisdom of holding closed sessions so that the members of opposing interests might have a chance to speak their minds freely without fear of having their words misconstrued or misunderstood. The former President said that he was, of course, in favor of a free press and free speech and that he was also in favor of them being used in the right direction.

crats, fearing for their lives, have left everything behind and fled to the country, seeking to pass the frontier at night or otherwise getting across with the intention of joining ex-King Ludwig, who, after adventurous wanderings has found his way to Vaduz in the principality of Ichtenstein, where he has settled.

Peasants Angry at "Maniacs"

If Munich should formally assume Bolshevism within the next few days, which she has already been practicing for during months, it is more than doubtful that the rest of Bavaria will submit to that rule. The South Bavarian peasants have no doubt about their attitude toward the "maniacs of Munich," which city, they declare, they will some day invade, and kill the usurpers with their flails. The Franconian Province, too, threatens to secede from Bavaria, and at only a sign from Weimar or Berlin, Munich will find itself almost completely isolated.

There is yet time to shut off hermetically the hotbed of Bolshevism, starve Munich into submission, and save Germany from the world-menacing disease, especially since the Government of Württemberg seems to have succeeded in quelling the Spartacide riots there. Unless Ebert and Scheidemann act quickly and determinedly, Bolshevism, it is feared, will have swayed the whole of Germany within a few weeks.

Unemployed to Hold Convention.

April 2.—A general belief is growing that between April 8 and 15 another rising against the Government may be looked for.

On April 6 the Congress of the German Councils of Arbeitslosen, or persons without employment, will begin in Berlin. This gathering alone, it is feared, constitutes a danger to public safety, or will at least be made the occasion for anti-Government demonstrations which, in prevailing circumstances, easily turn into riots.

Two days later the newly elected Congress of German Soldiers' and Workers' Councils will open in Berlin. The Independent Socialists propose to submit to this Congress a resolution of such a radical nature that, in case it is accepted, the Government would be forced to resign. It is doubtful, however, if the Independents will have a majority, even if, as they hope, a number of dissatisfied Social Democrats vote with them.

Nevertheless, the presence of so many discontented elements from all over Germany in the Capital will greatly strengthen the hands of the Communists, as the Spartacides call themselves now, the name "Spartacide" having become odious through the behavior of the criminals in that faction's ranks.

It is evident that the Independents, though they may disapprove housetop fighting and other methods of the Spartacides, are again playing into the hands of the latter, hoping with this aid to overthrow the Government which they eagerly wish to assume themselves.

Aiming to Divert Troops.

Doubtless the Spartacides are extremely busy in preparing for the next revolution. Their emissaries are responsible for the riots in Frankfurt, Stuttgart and other places, and the strikes in the Westphalian coal districts, all having been arranged for the purpose of distracting the Government troops from the Capital.

The Spartacides say quite frankly that they expect Russian and Hungarian emissaries and revolutionists from Austria and Bavaria within the next few days, and that emissaries in Berlin are trying their best to do the same as in Württemburg and Baden. Simultaneous risings are to break out in Berlin, according to the plans. The Spartacides are convinced that they will win this time.

The munition workers, though highly paid and receiving extra rations from the Government, have always proved disloyal to the latter and are commonly known to have provided arms and munitions for every Spartacide rising. At a meeting of their representatives in Erfurt they went so far yesterday as to pass a resolution refusing a further supply of munitions to the Government troops. Doubtless they count on Spartacide help to carry out their resolution.

Ludendorff Now an Issue.

The situation certainly looks very favorable for the Spartacides. Unfortunately the Government has estranged many honest and orderly workmen and other citizens by its extreme indulgence of the performance of such men as Ludendorff and other lesser military lights who do not realize that their days are gone. The creation of a State Court before which Ludendorff and others are to be tried came too late to allay the feeling of distrust against Ebert and Scheidemann. Ludendorff's popularity is entirely gone and people say that he is stopping at the Hotel Adlon now because he feels more secure under the protection of the American officers there.

The Spartacides threaten openly that they will hang Ludendorff on Hindenburg's iron-nailed statue in the Siegesallee or Avenue of Victory, if they catch him.

The labor elements are also provoked by the arrogant behavior of some officers of the so-called Freikorps or volunteer troops, nearly all of whom belong to the hated Junker class. However, it should be mentioned, efficient officers with other than Junker names cannot easily be found because the efficient non-Junker officers have long since returned to civil employment from which they cannot be spared.

Intellectuals Join Reds.

There is another element whose menace to the Government should not be underestimated—the intellectual proletarians—though keeping quiet as yet, they have become largely infected with Bolshevism. The least provocation may make them swell the Spartacide ranks enormously. Hunger is perhaps the driving power in their case.

Most curious is the fact that many lights of the stage, art, music, literature, and even science and circles sunning themselves in their light have not escaped the infection, foremost among them Moissi, Berlin's and perhaps Germany's greatest living actor. These people hold public meetings discussing the merits of the new gospel, which they assert, as yesterday in the overcrowded Rheingold Hall, means nothing but Christianity in its purest form.

Just outside the Rheingold on the Potsdam Platz, hundreds of street venders were at that very minute selling the loot of the last revolt. They disposed of watches, silk blouses, perfumes, embroidered linen, cognac, candies, and what not. They tell you quite frankly that the next rising is not more than a week off, and they seem to know.

OFFER TO LET POLES THROUGH GERMANY

MAY AGREE TO DANZIG

French Minister, the First Diplomat Accredited to Poland, Reaches Warsaw.

LONDON, April 4.—A proposal that the Polish troops of General Haller be taken by a land route from Lunéville across Germany to Poland has been made to Marshal Foch at Spa by Mathias Erzberger, the head of the German Armistice Commission, a semi-official message from Berlin says.

BERLIN, April 4, (Associated Press.)—The Zwoelfuhr-Blatt says today that it understands that the proposal of Mathias Erzberger, head of the German Armistice Commission, that the troops of General Haller's Polish forces be transported across Germany to Poland, is likely to be adopted.

On the other hand the Government today informed the party leaders that the Polish General Haller's troops might be landed in Danzig if the Entente would furnish guarantees for their good behavior.

This was the subject of a fresh conference between Marshal Foch and Mathias Erzberger Thursday evening.

A more optimistic feeling prevails today that the question can be settled amicably.

PARIS, April 4, (Havas.)—Marshal Foch, the allied Commander in Chief, (who went to Spa yesterday to discuss with German representatives the question of the return of the Polish troops in France through Danzig,) had a second conference at Spa with Mathias Erzberger, the head of the German Armistice Commission, after their first meeting yesterday morning, advices from Spa state. The first interview began at 9:30 o'clock in Marshal Foch's private car and lasted forty minutes. The second conference began at 11 o'clock and continued until 12:30 o'clock.

With Marshal Foch were General Weygand, his assistant, and General Nudant, the Marshal's representative stationed at Spa. Herr Erzberger was accompanied by General Baron von Hammerstein, a member of the German Armistice Commission, and another German Government official.

No word has yet been received in Paris respecting the result of the negotiations.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, the Polish Premier, is expected to arrive in Paris Saturday accompanied by J. J. Noulens and the other members of the allied mission which recently went to Warsaw.

M. Tralon, the French Minister to Poland, formally presented his credentials yesterday, according to a dispatch from Warsaw. He is the first diplomatic representative to be accredited to the new Government.

Siberian Army in Touch with Forces in Archangel

LONDON, April 4. — News has reached London that a detachment of Admiral Kolchak's Siberian forces has succeeded in getting in touch with a detachment of allied forces in the neighborhood of Archangel.

The position of the latter is anxious, but the allied troops command the Murman Railway and, consequently, the western ports on the White Sea, and it is believed there should be no difficulty in getting reinforcements there by the middle of May.

The recent reverses to the Bolsheviki are held to have improved the allied prospect of holding out.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Cable and Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 4.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, who has returned from the Far North, where during the Winter he had been Director of Arctic Equipment and Transport for the British forces in North Russia, has an intimate knowledge of the conditions which made it necessary to send reinforcements to the north. But one thing he says most emphatically at the outset:

"Those who have friends in the northern force need have no anxiety on the score of their health. The difficulty is that the Bolsheviki are pressing on in strength against the attenuated allied forces and making an effort to drive them into the sea.

"When the Bolsheviki send out a proclamation in four languages, copies of which I have seen, boasting that the allied Governments invited them to a meeting at Prinkipo, and that that proves the Allies are afraid, this naturally has an enormous effect on their own people, and when it is announced that allied troops are to be withdrawn from the northern fronts and no more troops are to be sent, it is interpreted by the Bolsheviki as a sign of weakness, and encourages them to attack in strength and try to win an easy victory. Friends are discouraged and the Allies are exposed to all the force of the Bolshevist onset.

"There is quite a strong force on the northern front. This force is disciplined by terror, and, judging by the way it fights, it cannot now be called a mob. There are many mercenaries among them. In one place where the Allies made captures 25 per cent. of the Bolsheviki were Chinese. Their troops were well equipped, and seem to have a considerable supply of munitions. We sometimes have seen indications that there are German commanders among them.

Could Not Withstand a Hard Blow.

"I am convinced the Bolshevist army will not be able to withstand a well-organized blow. The mere announcement that reinforcements are being sent to Archangel will have a tremendous effect on their morale. The Russians would mobilize more rapidly and join up with us if they could be certain we were going to stay and hold our own, but if there is danger of our withdrawal it is not to be expected that they will expose themselves to the risk of a terrible Bolshevist vengeance.

"Murmansk is ice-free. The bay, with the splendid port of Packine in front of Archangel, is a barrier, but communication is maintained with the Murman Railway by a coastal road. I consider it feasible to use former German battleships as icebreakers to take reinforcements to Archangel. Anyhow, it might be worth trying.

"People at home should remember that Bolshevism is not Russia. The Russian peasants in the north are certainly not Bolshevist. Most of them are a sturdy stock of fishermen, belonging to a strict religious sect, the Pomors. Indeed, there are many signs of a religious revival in Russia, and I am convinced that we shall soon see something very different from Bolshevism.

"But the fall of Archangel would resound throughout Russia and would be a tremendous blow to allied prestige. Our honor is at stake. The Bolshevist danger is spreading, and if the Russian Bolsheviki unite with the German Spartacides we shall have a new and very serious military danger to face. I am sure that a volunteer force, heartened by the knowledge that they were fighting as crusaders, would make all the difference to Archangel. Three months of determined effort would dissipate the menace of Bolshevism. Russia would be free and the world would be delivered from the most sinister danger that yet has uprisen."

The inspired announcement of the critical position of allied troops in Murmansk and Archangel comes as no surprise to me. Half-hearted help is almost as bad as no help at all and may lead to worse consequences. The northern expedition was undertaken half-heartedly from the first. A straight blow with a clear aim might have led to the overthrow of the Bolsheviki when the Archangel landing was effected last August. The Bolsheviki were panic-stricken. Lenine declared in a Cabinet meeting: "Our cause is lost."

At that time the way was clear for a rapid advance to vital, strategic positions. Vologda might have been taken. A junction might have been effected with the Czechoslovaks in Siberia, and Petrograd would have been in danger. Bolshevist prestige would have suddenly vanished and all the patriotic forces of Russia would have received vast encouragement.

No Allied Unity of Plan.

But, no, the Allies had no unity of plan. One ally was for pressing forward, another for pulling back. Politicians were at variance with military men, and the little force that might have covered itself with glory was left to stagnate. Just when on the Dvina its efforts were about to be crowned with certain success, when the Bolsheviki evacuated Kotlas on the railway leading to Viatka, Perm, and Siberia, allied troops were withdrawn to Winter quarters, where all these months they have sat in darkness.

The effect of the continued skirmishing on the northern front has been to tease the Red army into existence, to reduce our prestige, and proportionately to enhance the prestige of the Bolsheviki. The wretched Bolshevist conscripts would have deserted to us in hundreds if we had shown real energy, but, seeing us hesitate and vacillate, they dared not, so the Red army grew.

Politics since the armistice has made their position worse. The withdrawal from Shenkinsk and other parts of the Archangel front was the direct result of the Prinkipo proposal. The proposed Russian offensive through Finland against Petrograd, which would have relieved the pressure on the allied troops in the north, was not supported by the high authorities in Paris. Nothing was supported that might have reduced the power of our Bolshevist enemies. Instead of that we have had enervating inaction and futile talk of peaceable arrangements with the Bolsheviki.

Budapest Red Cabinet Split; Situation in City Critical

VIENNA, April 4, (via Copenhagen,) (Associated Press.)—A disagreement has occurred in the Soviet Government in Budapest, which has led to the formation of a still more radical wing of the Communist Party, according to the Reichspost.

The situation in Budapest is declared to be critical owing to food conditions and growing discontent on the part of the population.

DOUBT RUSSIAN REDS CAN SEND MUCH GOLD

A Large Amount of the Treasury Holdings Taken from the Reds at Kazan.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A statement issued here today, tending to refute the assertion made by Ludwig C. A. K. Mertens, alleged Bolshevist envoy, that his Government could deposit $200,000,000 in gold as a guarantee to cover purchases to be made here for the need of Bolshevist Russia. The statement says in part:

"The statement of the Russian State Bank of Sept. 16, 1917, (which is the last regular statement at hand,) shows the gold holdings to be $647,600,000. This sum, however, must be substantially diminished, owing to the fact that the balance sheet included on the credit side $132,200,000 which had been exported to allied countries. The actual amount of gold which was in the vaults of the State Bank at the end of October, 1917, can be estimated at $515,400,000.

"Of this amount $2,500,000 in gold was exported to neutral countries for the establishment of credits for the Russian Government, just prior to the Bolshevist upheaval and $100,000,000 in gold was transmitted to Germany in accordance with the terms of the peace treaty of Brest-Litovsk. It, therefore, appears that the quantity of gold remaining at the disposal of the Bolshviki after the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty amounted to $352,900,000, which was transported to Moscow, Kazan, and Nizny-Novogord.

"The main part of this gold, which had been stored in Kazan, was taken from the Bolsheviki by the Peoples' Army in the Autumn of 1918, when they succeeded in taking this city and 30,000 poods (1,080,000 pounds of gold equaling $325,000,000) which was forwarded to Siberia. Upon deduction of this sum it appears that from the gold fund of the Russian State Bank $27,900,000 remains at present in the hands of the Bolsheviki.

"The gold which can possibly be at the disposition of the Bolshevist authorities at the present time may have been augmented from another source; the gold fund of the Bank of Rumania, approximately $125,000,000, was transported to Moscow prior to the invasion of Rumania by Germany in the Summer of 1917, and this gold was declared by the Bolsheviki to be confiscated from the 'Imperialistic Rumanian Government' and belonging to the Soviet Republic. The delivery in trust to the Allies until the signature of peace of the Rumanian gold is stipulated in clause 19 of the armistice terms signed by Germany on November 11, 1918.

"The above data show that the gold which can possibly be at the disposal of the Bolsheviki amounts to $27,900,000 plus the amount of the Rumanian gold fund which may not have been yielded to Germany by the Bolsheviki."

To Send American Cattle to France.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—American dairy cattle are to be sent to devastated districts of France, where they will do their "bit" toward restoring the health of the children of those regions. More than 100 head of pure bred cattle, recently purchased by the French High Commission and selected from the best herds by experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, will leave New York for Havre shortly on a specially equipped transport. There is said to be an urgent demand for milk from the war-stricken areas.

REDS STILL ATTACK ON NORTHERN FRONT

Bolshevist Forces Repulsed Five Times in Two Days by the Allies.

RADICAL LOSSES HEAVY

Attacks Will Be Continued While the Snow Lasts, but There Are Signs of a Thaw.

LONDON, April 4.—The Bolsheviki in attacks east of Bolshoia Ozera were defeated the allied forces four times on March 31 and once again on April 1, according to an official statement issued today on operations in North Russia. The losses of the enemy were considerable, while the allied casualties were slight.

The text of the communication follows:

On March 31 the Bolsheviki four times attacked in strength our positions east of Bolshoia Ozera and again on April 1, when they also attacked along the railway. All the attacks were defeated.

Our troops showed great gallantry and steadiness. Our losses were slight, but the enemy losses were considerable. A regimental commissary who was taken prisoner said that the attacks were meant to be decisive. It is expected that the attacks will continue while the snow lasts, but there are signs of a thaw.

During the last forty-eight hours the enemy delivered an attack on the Archangel front without artillery preparation, but was beaten off with a fair amount of losses, according to other news received here. The allied losses were slight. The attack occurred at Bolshoia Ozera.

ARCHANGEL, April 2, (Associated Press.)—At allied headquarters this afternoon it was reported that the situation was unchanged on all fronts. The enemy has made no new attacks since being severely repulsed yesterday, but the artillery on both sides continues active in the Odozerskaia sector.

After the Bolsheviki had held a position for several hours astride the road between Bolshoia Ozera and Odozerskaia on Sunday afternoon, they were driven out and it is reported by prisoners that their losses were extremely heavy. One shell from a Russian battery exploded in the midst of a party of Bolsheviki, killing fifteen men. The allied machine gun fire also caused many casualties.

It was during the period when the enemy held this road and were raiding the allied lines to the rear over a little-used trail through the woods that Bryan R. Ryall, (whose name has been previously given as Royal) Bloomfield, N. J., a Y. M. C. A. secretary, and several soldiers, including two Americans, were taken prisoner. According to a Bolshevist prisoner brought into Archangel today, the American and British prisoners taken in this sector were removed to a village south of Bolshoia Ozera and were well treated.

The American casualties during the last two weeks of fighting about Bolshoia Ozera include one officer and five men killed and seven wounded. Nine others are unofficially reported missing.

General Marushevsky, Commander of the Russian anti-Bolshevist forces in Northern Russia, has startled Archangel with an unusual proclamation intended to call the bluff of Bolshevist sympathizers in this territory. It says in part:

"I consider it my duty to expel out of the territory occupied by the army all persons whose presence is undesirable. I consider that the Bolsheviki and their agents and all adherents of the Soviet cause are such persons. Such persons still living in the zone intrusted to me will be expelled systematically, being sent to their beloved country of the People's Commissaries, the Soviet land where all their ideals such as 'Soviet comradeship and abundant food' and open theft, violence and other Bolshevist things become true."

NO FEAR FOR AMERICANS.

Could Retreat from Outposts in Armored Cars, Bliss Indicates.

PARIS, April 4.—The situation in the Archangel region in Northern Russia has been forcibly brought to the attention of the Peace Conference by the publication in Paris of the British statement that the troops in the Murmansk and Archangel districts were in danger of extermination unless they were speedily reinforced. Brig. Gen. W. P. Richardson, U. S. A., is on his way to take command of the American forces in north Russia and is expected to reach Murmansk with 200 soldiers in a few days. There is apparently no change, however, in the avowed intention to take the American troops out of the region at the earliest possible date.

General Tasker H. Bliss and other American representatives here, while frankly admitting the gravity of the situation, are inclined to believe that the troops at distant outposts can retreat, if necessary, before an advance by the Bolsheviki, as armored trains are available for all the Americans in the region south of Archangel and Murmansk.

Relief of Archangel from the sea will probably not be possible before the end of May because of the ice, but the forces in the city are well equipped with artillery and ammunition. There is no direct communication at present by either land or sea between Murmansk and Archangel. Murmansk, however, can be relieved immediately from the sea.

The feeling in American circles here is that the British statement possibly overemphasizes the gravity of the situation because of the desire to send large reinforcements and, perhaps, because there may be an announcement soon of the allied policy toward the Bolsheviki.

TCHITCHERIN STILL DENYING.

Sends Another Message to Bela Kun Denouncing French "Falsehood."

PARIS, April 4, (Associated Press.)—M. Tchitcherin, the Russian Bolshevist Foreign Minister, continues to use the wireless to deny authorship of the recent message picked up by the French Government wireless operators regarding the spreading of Bolshevism in America. Another wireless message was picked up in Paris today addressed to Bela Kun, Foreign Minister of the new Hungarian Government. It says in part:

"I have already told you that the French intercepted the alleged wireless I had addressed to you, purporting to say that there should be Bolshevist troubles in America. I tell you that the purpose of their falsehood is to prevent Mr. Wilson from compromising with us. Have the goodness to give my denial to the American Government through the American Consul."

London Papers Enraged by Revelation of Archangel Peril.

LONDON, April 4.—Grief, indignation and bewilderment are the feelings expressed by the newspapers at the revelation of the Allied position at Murmansk, while it is urged that the peril of the troops is a reason why the Peace Conference should settle its policy toward Russia without delay.

BOSTON WELCOMES FIRST OF THE 26TH

REST OF DIVISION DUE SOON

Major Gen. Edwards Sends Message Major General Hale Sends Message to Mothers and Praises

BOSTON, April 4.—The first of the 26th, or New England, Division to arrive home from France reached here today, 6,000 strong, on the transport Mount Vernon, which in pre-war days, as the North German Lloyd liner, was known as the Kronprinzessin Cecilie. Then known as the "treasure ship," she returned to Boston in 1914 laden with gold and passengers for Germany after being turned back when in mid-ocean by a message warning her that war had been declared and that she was liable to capture.

The troops on the Mount Vernon comprised Division Headquarters, with Major Gen. Harry C. Hale commanding; Headquarters Troop, the 104th Infantry, the 101st Engineers, (except Company C, which is on the America,) the 101st Engineers' Train, Headquarters 52d Infantry Brigade, and military police.

The Mount Vernon arrived in a fog, which interfered somewhat with the harbor greeting program, but as soon as she could be made out a score of committee boats, carrying delegations representative of all New England, flocked about her. The soldiers, most of them proud wearers of three gold chevrons, lining the rails or perching in the rigging, were cheered by thousands on the welcoming flotilla.

A fleet of welcoming vessels met the troopship as she broke through the mist, and drew within calling distance as the steamer slowed down.

"I welcome you to Massachusetts," Governor Coolidge shouted through a megaphone. "Rhode Island is glad you are here," cried Governor Beeckman. "New Hampshire is proud of you; hurry home," was the message from Governor Bartlett. Governor Milliken assured the man of Maine. "The Pine Tree State glories in your deeds and welcomes you back." Mayor Adams of Springfield, the headquarters of the 104th Regiment; ex-Mayor James Logan of Worcester and other delegates from home towns added to the welcoming chorus.

Tonight the soldiers remained on the transport. Tomorrow morning they will entrain for Camp Devens, to await there the arrival of the rest of the division, the big parade and demobilization. Wireless dispatches from others of the homeward bound ships carrying units of the 26th Division indicated today that they would reach here on schedule time. The America is due tomorrow and the Agamemnon and Mongolian early in the coming week and it is believed that other vessels, carrying the last of the division, will have arrived by the middle of the month.

Present plans call for the reception and parade of the division here on April 25, but the date will not be definitely fixed until there has been an opportunity tomorrow to confer with Major Gen. Hale.

The roof of every building on the water front and the roofs of business blocks as far as Washington Street were covered with a wildly gesticulating multitude when the transport came into the harbor. Windows overlooking the harbor were filled, and every foot of standing room on the edge of the bay appeared to be occupied. Flags waved above the heads of joyous thousands.

General Hale said that the men wished to do everything possible to assist in the plans for the official reception, but those from points beyond New England were anxious to reach home as soon as possible, and, with a three weeks' wait in prospect, probably would elect to be forwarded immediately to the camps nearest to their homes for discharge. He said he was in favor of local celebrations, with parades by the organizations, but action to met the wishes of many city committees to this end would have to come from Washington.

General Hale's first word was a message to the mothers of the men of the 26th.

"You will find your boys changed," he said, "changed for the better. They come back to you men of a high order, their characters rounded out by the unselfishness bred of war and by the tremendous amount of fighting which they went through."

Replying to welcomes of official delegations, the men of the 26th mingled calls of "When do we go home?" with "We want General Edwards—where is he?" General Edwards, who is now commanding the Northeastern Department, was hurrying back from a tour in Maine, and sent word that he would be here tomorrow morning to greet his boys.

DAVIS HELD IN LONDON.

Scotland Yard Gives Information Regarding Alleged Army Deserter.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 4.—A cable dispatch from Scotland Yard officials received today by Charles W. Hansen, Bertillon experts of Nassau County, said that William Bishop Davis, a former Captain in the 7th Ohio Engineers, who is wanted by the Federal and the civil authorities here on charges of desertion from the army and abandonment of his wife, was a prisoner in London Tower, awaiting trial for grand larceny. He had been arrested there, it was said, on complaint of Lo[illegible]e Edward, an actress.

According to Mr. Hansen, Davis was born in Chicago. It is alleged that while a Captain in the Quartermaster's Department at Camp Devens in 1917 he deserted, taking $250 of Government funds; that he enlisted in the 23d Infantry in Brooklyn under the name of Vivian Brewer and later deserted while stationed at Camp Dix; that he married Miss Tessie Seaman of Port Washington and within a few months deserted her. The authorities traced him to Canada, where he had enlisted in an infantry regiment.

BRITISH PRICES STAY UP.

Will Be "Only 30 Per Cent. Higher" Than 1914 Level, Minister States.

LONDON, March 28, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The Ministry of Reconstruction is convinced that while prices in Great Britain may be expected to fall from the present war record, "it is out of the question that they should fall to anything like the 1914 level in the near future. With luck, the general level for the next decade may be only 25 to 30 per cent. higher."

This information is contained in a pamphlet issued by the Ministry and sold to the public. After pointing out that prices were advancing before war was declared, it explains the various causes which have combined to bring about the great rise of the last four years. Reduced output, increased freight rates, limitation of imports and issuance of paper money are assigned as the principal causes.

HUNGER AIDS GERMAN REDS

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

is the same—witness the murder of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg. Nor does it enjoy the confidence of the Entente. If the Entente trusted Ebert it would send food and open peace negotiations. It holds off because it knows the Ebert Government cannot last. What is the use of a Government that cannot give the people food or peace?

"The Majority Socialists have betrayed the revolution and are merely aiding capitalism. The Government must go!

"Next, all military action against the Bolshevist army must cease. The Bolsheviki are bringing peace and equality, and the stories about the cruelty and excesses are lies invented by the Ebert Government. Terrorism in Russia was caused, not by Bolshevism but by troops sent there by Germany. When the Russians come, we will open our arms and receive them like brothers come to free us from tyranny. Then the whole world will be aflame and communism and peace will be established."

Berlin is the centre of the Spartacide organization, but there are branch organizations throughout Germany. Agitators direct their activities particularly toward the troops. The unemployed are sent to selected places to cause disturbances. The Spartacide leaders appear to have ample funds, said to be imported mainly through Holland. They maintain a well-conducted propaganda, including several newspapers.

Aid of Criminals Is Sought.

The Spartacides have contact with the Independent Socialists through the Freiheit newspaper. Great activity is displayed in pamphleteering. Their agents find willing audiences among the great masses of hungry people, who talk, disperse, meet, and talk again, all day long. The criminal classes are brought in to help spread discontent, and these in return are protected in their crime.

In private conversation some Bolshevist intellectuals admit that much that is valuable and beautiful will be destroyed and there will be a period of suffering and bloodshed in inaugurating communism. But at the same time, they say, the chains of commerce, ties of treaties and agreements, and all national burdens and debts will be swept away, and Europe will start afresh. Only the land will remain for the men with muscles to work and create thereon fields, houses, railways, and some machinery. Then German industry and application will reap their reward, and the international proletariat, in which Germany will play a leading part, will guarantee universal peace.

The investigators talked with workmen and unemployed in the cafés and bierstuben of the poor, and listened to their conversations. In nine cases out of ten they say: "We are not Spartacides, but if we don't get food very soon we will smash everything up, plunder the rich, plunder the farmers, join the Russians, and plunder Europe."

Russian Alliance Alluring.

The part of the program which involves joining the Russians exercises a remarkable fascination on the minds of the Berlin population. In fact, the danger is not so remote as it might appear. The German forces on the east front are not increasing; deserters to the Bolsheviki are as numerous as the recruits from Germany. Bad weather has caused the Russian advance to be less rapid, but as soon as Spring sets in and the Bolsheviki begin to need further food supplies for their army—which the German General Staff estimates at 400,000 to 500,000 men—they will make a new start, and there is very little prospect that the Germans will be able to prevent it. Although the internal discipline of the Bolshevist army is of unparalleled rigor, its battle discipline is of no account, and probably 50,000 uncorrupted troops would be sufficient to rout them. But there is not a single German regiment which may be regarded as immune from this dangerous disease so long as Germany itself is in the present condition of Spartacide ferment.

There are a few who realize that their condition would not be improved by this process. But the vast majority are beyond logic or argument and have reached a condition of desperation the danger of which cannot possibly be exaggerated. They have waited for food from the west, and so far waited in vain. They now turn to the east and look to the coming of the Bolsheviki as though Lenine were a Messiah.

The lower classes of Germany are not interested in communism or any other kind of political theory for its own sake. Any kind of political orator who promised food would be listened to with equal readiness. The ordinary German is interested, not in Bolshevism, but in food, and it is only because the two are associated in his mind that he listens to the doctrine of the revolutionary.

The masses are like people wandering around in a thick fog and unable to find their way out. Prolonged undernourishment has produced a condition of nervous irritability and incapacity to undertake any organized action. In their aimless groping for a path of escape they constantly bump against their neighbors and trample on their feet. Their tempers are becoming more and more dangerous, and if some ray of light does not soon come to pierce the gloom it is absolutely certain that in the shortest possible time complete anarchy will break out, every industrial centre will be destroyed, the rich will be robbed of everything they possess, and the state of the country will be at least as bad as that of Russia.

It must be repeated that this view is not based merely on the observations and prophecies of the Governmental and commercial classes. The crowded audiences at the Spartacide meetings and the tension and excitement prevailing, are convincing proof of this, still further confirmed by the reports of official and private secret services.

Berlin Troops Corrupted.

Secret meetings are constantly held—there is one almost every day in some part of Berlin—at which reports are handed in by agitators of the number of people they have been able to win over to their cause. These men direct their activities particularly toward the troops of the Berlin garrison. According to the most recent reports, practically all the Republikanische Soldatenwehr—about 1,300 men—had come over, and about one-third of the Freikorps Lüttwitz—about 30,000 men.

The most casual observer cannot fail to notice the low state of health in the appearance of the population, especially in Berlin. It is said that conditions in Saxony are even worse. Most of all, the absence of fats has undoubtedly had a directly deleterious effect on the brain. Further, the constant and ever-present anxiety as to whether food would be procurable has in the course of the last two years worked on the people's nerves to a disastrous extent. It cannot possibly be doubted that the immediate arrival of a certain amount of fats and milk and the definite promise of regular supplies of necessary foodstuffs would have an extremely far-reaching effect in calming the populace and would with one blow knock away the half-platform of the Spartacides.

The next factor in the situation is unemployment. This is in a large measure bound up with the food question, since much of the unwillingness to work is certainly due to weakness and apathy, the result of underfeeding. In the opinion of the labor experts, the high rate of unemployment pay and strikes for higher wages are due much more to the high cost of food than to any definite working class movement. If food were cheapened these questions would gradually settle themselves. The very fact of Germany's desperate economic situation is a certain safeguard against extravagant demands in this direction, if once the food question were adjusted.

The greater part of the prevailing unemployment, however, is due not to strikes nor unwillingness to work, but to actual lack of raw materials. It is practically impossible at the present moment to surmount the difficulties of the transport situation, since the necessary metals for the construction of locomotives, &c., are unprocurable. Coal, therefore, must be left at the pit mouth for lack of transport. This compels numerous factories to close which might otherwise continue to work. Thus a vicious circle is formed from which it will only be possible to escape when raw materials are introduced.

Vexations of Delayed Peace.

The third factor is the delay in the peace negotiations and the indefinite prolonging of the armistice. This is a circumstance which is much exploited by the middle and particularly the Government classes. They are continually insisting that the petty annoyances of the armistice conditions are arousing the people to a fury which will inevitably lead to Bolshevism and will finally breed a spirit of hatred and revenge more terrible than anything mankind has yet experienced. The masses probably would not pay much attention to this, if only they had food and work. It is certain that the manufacturers feel it very much, and it is one of the causes of their extreme timidity in starting enterprises. In this way, therefore, it reacts on the masses of the people, in so far as it tends to increase unemployment. It is true, too, that the feeling of animosity against the French, who are regarded as responsible for the armistice, is increasing daily.

But most the serious effect of the delay is that on the Government. The greatest difficulty of the Government is that it can do nothing for the people. It cannot produce food, nor work, nor peace. It will probably make very little difference what sort of peace it is. There will be indignant protest in any case.

The Government appears to be making a genuine effort to resist the spread of Bolshevism, but with only partial success. Indeed, it may be regarded as certain that without external aid, those attempts are doomed to failure. The activity in this direction takes three forms: (1) repression by force, (2) propaganda, (3) removing the causes of unrest by satisfying the physical needs of the people.

The success of the first of these forms of activity depends, of course, upon the number and trustworthiness of the troops of which the Government can depend, and upon the power and ability of the police, whether secret or otherwise. One of the first actions of the Socialist Government which was set up in November was to abolish the Secret Police, which had, of course, been the real instrument of tyranny under the old régime. The result, however, was that the Government was left without any organization for watching the secret agents, which now is at least as effective as that of a monarchical despot.

Government Police Inefficient.

It has been found necessary, therefore, gradually to recall a certain number of the old Secret Police for the purpose of counter-spying against the Spartacide agents. This service, however, is very much hampered by the fact that the Government does not openly acknowledge its existence, and the members of the service themselves are both uncertain of the support they will receive in case of difficulty and also continually afraid that some new Socialist Minister may at any moment be appointed who will abolish the whole service again and deprive them of their means of livelihood.

The ordinary police, who in former times consisted mainly of noncommissioned officers, made themselves so unpopular with the people in the past that under the present circumstances they have lost all control over the population. They do not any longer exist as a reliable factor in the situation. Their place is taken for the most part by the so-called Republikanisch Soldatenwehr (Republican Soldiers' Guard.) This force consists of some 1,300 men and is composed of the various Wehre raised by different Socialist town commandants, e. g., Volkswehr (People's Guard,) Bürgerwehr (Civic Guard,) &c. They wear red brassards and may be hired to guard private houses, and also are stationed outside public buildings. They are mostly old men and boys, attracted by the idle life and high pay. They are wholly unreliable, and in case of disturbance invariably take off their brassards and either melt away from the scene or actually join the rioters. Attempts are being made to remove them gradually to outlying portions of the town and to replace them by troops of the Freikorps Lüttwitz.

This corps consists of some 25,000 to 30,000 men, and is composed of voluntary troops enlisted in Cadres of old regiments. In most cases these regiments consist of only two or three companies. They retain a certain number of their old officers, but are almost all subject to the control of the Soldatenräte, (Soldiers' Councils.) It is against these that the activity of the Spartacide agents is particularly directed, and, according to most recent reports, one-third of them are infected with the disease. The Franzer Regiment has declared that it will go over en masse to the Spartacides in case of trouble, so as to avoid bloodshed. Certain units, e. g., that commanded by Gerstenberg, which was sent to Bremen, are still reliable; but the general impression is that in case of further outbreaks the troops will certainly join the winning side.

If, therefore, the masses of the population were opposed to the Spartacides—as they probably would be, if they were fed and clothed—then the troops would not hesitate to obey the orders of their officers. If, however, the population should show an inclination to side with the rioters the troops would at best take no action.

The total number of troops with the colors in Germany is now something like 200,000. Of these, the majority are under Hindenburg's command on the east front. They are for the most part locally recruited, but their leaders are very much hampered by the activities of the Soldatenräte, which are at once more powerful and more radical in East Prussia than in any other part of Germany. Further, the methods of propaganda by which the Russian Bolshevist leaders prepare the advance of their armies are bidding fair to paralyze any resistance by the Germans.

To sum up in a few words the capacity of the Government for the repression of Bolshevism by force: The police are hampered in their operations and lacking in support; the garrison troops can be depended upon to side with the majority, and the troops on the frontier are useless unless they can be made to feel that the country is solidly behind them.

A good deal might possibly be done by the Government in the direction of explaining to the people by means of newspaper articles, &c., what Bolshevism in Russia really means. The masses of the people have no conception of the conditions actually prevalent in that country. They are constantly told by the Spartacides that it is a Communist Paradise, and they are naturally unwilling to believe the few members of the upper class who have endeavored to inform them of the truth.

Reds Have Cowed the Press.

There are two reasons why the Government campaigns of the past four years have produced in the population an attitude of such unmitigated cynicism that they steadfastly refuse to believe anything that the newspapers print. The second reason is that the Spartacides have a very ready way of dealing with the newspaper which print anything they regard as dangerous. They turn machine guns on the building, storm it, and throw the presses and staff bodily into the street. Vorwärts was treated in this way, and as a result the other papers firmly refuse to print any anti-Bolshevist propaganda.

But neither of these methods—force or propaganda—is or can be of any avail, unless the Government is able to remove the real cause of unrest. Unless it can provide food, work and peace, every other effort is useless.

A society called the Anti-Bolshevikische Liga has been founded for fighting the Bolshevist movement in all its forms. The moving spirit in this society is Dr. Stadtler, who has been in Russia during the greater part of the war, first as a soldier, then as a prisoner, and finally as an official in the German Consulate in Moscow, where he saw and opposed the pro-Lenine policy of the old German Government. This society prints pamphlets and endeavors—seldom with success—to secure the insertion of articles in the papers and to organize lectures in all parts of the country. It also has a sort of amateur secret service organized by an officer who has a number of agents in Berlin and in different parts of the country. These agents all testify to the rapidity of the growth of the movement.

There is also a society in Berlin of an amiable academic tendency, which meets weekly and discusses the menace of Bolshevism. Its members call themselves "Solidarists," and among them are some distinguished men of science and letters. The chief characteristic of the speeches is a feeling that "to fight Bolshevism you must understand it." This argument provided an excuse for endless analyses and classifications, in the best professorial German manner, which was only dispelled by a member of the Russian Cadet Party, who had escaped a few days before from Moscow and blew all their theories to the four quarters of heaven by reciting a few facts from his own experience.

The above is another instance of the fatal disease of words which has spread all over Germany. It is a disease which appears to induce a condition of complete physical lethargy. There is no doubt that for this, too, the only remedy is food.

Madmen Toying with Bolshevism.

Is Bolshevism being used by the German Government as a bogey to frighten the Entente, either for the purpose of extracting better peace terms, or as an excuse for a revival of militarism? A categorical negative answer would probably not be entirely correct. There is some reason to believe that a small party of reactionaries—some of them in Government service—unable to rid themselves of their old habits and ideals, are still intriguing with this dangerous instrument. They believe that if they could introduce Bolshevism in all the western countries, Germany would probably be the first to recover from it, and that the recovery would take the form of a monarchical reaction. It must however, be understood that this party is infinitesimally small and entirely without influence in Governmental, commercial, or any other circles.

The real danger of Bolshevism for Germany and the rest of Europe remains none the less imminent because a few madmen are so ill-advised as to toy with it. And a renewal of militarism at the present time, or, indeed, for many years to come, is entirely out of the question. If there is one sentiment in Germany which is absolutely genuine and universal, it is the hatred of the soldiers and sailors for their officers and all that is included in the word militarism. Any revival of that spirit or of that system is unthinkable.

Parallel with this sentiment is the contempt felt by the military and civilians alike for the Hohenzollerns. The royal houses of Prussia, Bavaria and Saxony are all commonly spoken of with hatred, or at least with scorn. Even those rulers who are comparatively popular, as, for example, the Grand Duke of Baden, are regarded as belonging to a past epoch. Prince Max of Baden is treated by workmen, officials, and others, in terms of perfect equality, very different from the deference formerly paid to a member of the Grand Ducal house. There is, of course, a certain number of people, particularly women, who indulge in sentimental talk about the fallen Emperor. In Cassel, notices were posted in shop windows exhorting the women of Germany to join in protest against any attack on the personal immunity of the ex-Kaiser. It is, in fact, possible that any violent punitive action in this direction by the Entente would result in a wave of indignation among some classes and would induce a certain reaction in sentiment. There is only one combination of events which could render it possible, namely, the overthrow of the present Government and the constitution of a definitely Bolshevist régime. It is just conceivable that then a reaction in favor of some monarchical régime—probably not that of the Hohenzollerns—would follow.

Food the Best Aid to Order.

It has been said—and it is certainly not an exaggeration—that three things are necessary for the suppression of Bolshevism in Germany: (1) food, (2) food, and (3) food; and the most important kind of food is fat. It may be added that unemployment and the idleness resulting from it can be met only by the introduction of raw materials, particularly cotton and certain kinds of metals for locomotive building.

Finally it is certain that settled conditions will not return and that manufacturers will not have the courage to start new enterprises or to embark on reorganization for peace work, before peace is established, or, at any rate, some form of peace is concluded.

If food is not sent into the country within a few weeks the seething unrest in Berlin will, barring miracles, burst into flames, and while the terms of peace are being discussed the nation with which peace is to be signed will have ceased to exist. The Spartacides are probably right when they say that the present Government enjoys but little respect or confidence, either at home or abroad. But if this Government goes it is Radek or one of his followers who will become the uncrowned King of Germany.

Necessity of Supporting Ebert.

It is therefore essential that the present Government receive definite support from the Entente. It must be made clear that it is with this Government and with it only, that the Entente will treat, and into its hands [illegible] that food will be delivered. Ther[illegible] certain practical questions conne[illegible] with the delivery which are worth [illegible]sideration. It is the general opinion that the distribution and protection of the food be left in the hands of the Government. At the very least commissioners should be sent to supervise and control the process. At present the Government probably still has sufficient power to protect the food, if landed at Hamburg or some other port, and to transfer it to the necessary centres.

It is stated that there are certain reserves of food in Denmark which the Danish Government would be willing to release for Germany if the Entente were to give its permission. It cannot be insisted too strongly that large quantities are necessary, and still more that a constant supply for the next three or four months must be promised if the ravages of the disease of Bolshevism are to be checked.

Should serious disturbances arise in Berlin before food can be brought in, there is still one possibility of revictualling the country and resisting the danger. It might be possible to send the food to southwest Germany by the Rhine. This portion of the country is still, politically, the least infected, and if the people of Baden and Bavaria were certain that their food supply was forthcoming and that the support of the Entente could be counted on, it might be possible to create and erect here a last line of defence against the Bolsheviki, should Prussia and Saxony be overrun.

Another measure which would strike a heavy blow at Bolshevist propaganda would be the artificial depreciation of the ruble. If the Entente were to forbid anybody outside of Russia to accept rubles as currency for a certain period of time the Spartacides would soon find their supply of funds running short; and there is no doubt that Russian money is one of the most potent instruments of propaganda. Some Germans declare that they are ready enough for the Entente to occupy Essen or Düsseldorf or any other German town, if only they will occupy Petrograd and Libau, as well as send troops to Kiev and cut off the transport of arms through Siberia. Manufacturers admit that they would rather pay indemnity than fall into the hands of the Bolsheviki.

Willing to Do Anything for Food.

The weakness of the German Government and the docility of the people are such that the supply of food could be accompanied by the imposition of any conditions, military, political, and economic, that might be desired. The military authorities declare that Germany would raise troops to fight under English or American leadership against a Bolshevist army. Business men say that commercially Germany could be made into a British colony. For instance, if a clause were put in the peace treaty to the effect that no firms financed by a given percentage of British or American capital should be subject to socialization, this would create a demand for English and American capital, and thus place the greater part of German industry under British control.

Finally, from a political point of view, unlimited influence over the future of Germany could be obtained, especially by England. At the present time the Germans see their future destiny hovering in a sort of limbo between the Paradise of Wilsonian Promises and the Inferno of French Desires. The actual region to which it will be assigned is believed to depend on England. The result is that they fear that England is behind France in any harshness they experience, and doubt whether she is backing America when they see signs of any amelioration in their condition. The possibility, therefore, of extending British influence is enormous.

There is a small party of political journalist which writes and speaks in favor of rapprochement with France, still regarding the Anglo-Saxon race as the real enemy of Germany. It is curious to notice that no one in Germany seems to realize that any power with which a rapprochement is contemplated might conceivably be unwilling to adopt such a policy. That lack of appreciation of foreign mentality which has always characterized the German is as prevalent as ever, and it is that fact, undoubtedly, which explains many of the politic utterances of German statesmen at the present time. But their incapacity to deal with the situation in no way lessens the reality of the danger.

If the Spartacides have a few weeks more for the development of their propaganda under the increasing stress of famine and unemployment, there is no question that the whole country will be consumed by a flame of Bolshevism which will spread with such rapidity that the waters of the Rhine will be incapable of checking its advance.

RAILROAD INCOME SHOWS BIG DECLINE

Government Reports Net Operating Revenue for February of Only $10,000,000.

$2,225,000 UNDER LAST YEAR

Rise in Cost of Labor and Materials Offsets Gains Due to Higher Freight Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Government's net operating income for the railroads in February, as shown by the advance figures from reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission, were slightly more than $10,000,000, the lowest in a number of years, and $2,225,000 below the income of February of 1918, which was probably the worst February from an operating standpoint in railroad history.

While freight traffic fell off about 13½ per cent. as compared with February last year, higher rates ran the total operating revenues up to $350,844,000, an increase of 21 per cent., but the great increase in the cost of labor and materials raised expenses under a smaller volume of traffic by 24 per cent. to $323,235,000. This left a net revenue of $27,609,000, a decrease of 4 per cent. and a net operating income of $10,015,000, a decrease of 14 per cent.

This net operating income of $10,105,000, compares with the February standard return in the three-year test period, on which the Government rental is based, of $47,000,000. In January the net operating income was $18,000,000, as compared with the January standard return in the three-year test period, on which the Government rentals are based, of $55,000,000. Thus the net operating income in January was $37,000,000 less than the three-year January average of $55,000,000, while the February operating income was $37,000,000 less than the three-year February average return of $47,000,000.

Drop in Net Standard.

The net standard return during the three-year test period for the months of January and February was $102,000,000, but the net operating income of $18,000,000 in January and of $10,000,000 in February, or $28,000,000 for the two months, is $74,000,000 less than the net standard return for the two months during the test period. During the twelve months of 1918, the first year of Government control and operation of the roads, the net Federal income fell short of the standard return by $202,135,602. Adding $74,000,000 as representing the amount by which the net Federal income in January and February of 1919 fell short of the standard return for these months during the three-year test period, the deficit for fourteen months of Federal operation would be $274,000,000.

The standard rental for the year which the Government pays to the roads is $890,335,685. The rental paid by the Government to the railroads averages, in round numbers, $75,000,000 a month for Class 1 roads, and switching and terminal companies—the carriers included in the Interstate Commerce Commission's monthly reports. On this basis of actual rental of $75,000,000 a month, the actual rental for the two months of January and February would be approximately $150,000,000. As compared with this actual rental of $75,000,000 a month, January's net operating income fell short of the rental $57,000,000. As compared with this actual rental of $75,000,000 a month, February's net operating income fell short of the rental $65,000,000. As compared with the actual rental of about $150,000,000 for the two months, the net operating income for the two months, amounting to $28,000,000, fell short of the rental $122,000,000.

Total Deficit $324,000,000.

This deficit of $122,000,000, as compared with the actual rental of $75,000,000 a month, for the first two months of 1919, added to the sum of $202,135,602, which is the amount by which the net Federal income fell short of the standard return in 1918, would bring the total deficit for fourteen months of Government operation of the roads to $324,000,000.

The Governmental rental is about $226,000,000 a quarter, but the average net operating income by quarters in the three-year period was as follows:

First quarter	$170,000,000
Second quarter	227,000,000
Third quarter	256,000,000
Fourth quarter	252,000,000

With two-thirds of the first quarter of 1919 gone the net income for two months, as compared with net standard return, has been only $28,000,000.

SIX WOUNDED MEN OF OLD 69TH RETURN

Three Transports Arrive with 5,000 Troops, Many of Whom Are Recovering from Wounds.

TWO DEATHS ON THE ROMA

Three transports arrived yesterday from Northern and Southern France bringing more than 5,000 troops, which included a number of sick and wounded, among whom were several members of the 165th Regiment, better known as the Old 69th of New York.

On board the armored cruiser Frederick were 1,613 troops, of whom 28 officers and 1,535 enlisted men belonged to the 337th Infantry of the 85th Division, chiefly men of Wisconsin and Michigan, who were trained at Camp Custer, Battle Creek. About two-thirds of those on board were replacement troops, mostly convalescents, from other divisions.

The following six noncommissioned officers and men were from the 165th Infantry, and had all been wounded at Château-Thierry and St. Mihiel: Sergeant Joseph B. Ward of Company B, Hoboken, N. J.; Corporal Charles Knowles, Company M, Passaic, N. J.; Corporal Dennis J. Richardson, Company B, Bayonne, N. J.; Private Patrick J. Dowling, Company K, Bayonne, N. J.; Private Edward P. McCreary, Company L, Union Hill, N. J., and Sergeant Frank May, Company M, Jersey City Heights.

The troops were commanded by Major Charles E. Merrill of 432 Twelfth Avenue, who went to France in May, 1918, with the 303d Ammunition Train and afterwards became adjutant of the 156th Brigade, 78th Division.

There were a number of casual officers on the Frederick, including Captain Thomas G. Cassidy of Spencer, Ind., who is an Ace, having nine German aeroplanes to his credit, officially. He has flown on nearly every section of the western front and has the D. S. C., with one oak leaf, and the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre from the French Government. He declined to give any particulars of his adventures in the war.

Two of the enlisted men among the troops on the cruiser had the D. S. C. One was Sergeant C. W. Allen of Drummond, Okla., of the 357th Infantry in the 90th Division. The other hero who was awarded the D. S. C. was Private Edgar Pennington of Altus, Okla., Company K of the 357th Infantry, who did not know anything about the decoration until three days ago, when one of his officers told him of it.

Among the 2,629 troops arriving on the Arizonan were 17 officers and 712 men from the Fifth Corps Artillery Park, mostly Chicago men, who will go to Camp Grant, Ill. The 13th Aero Squadron, practically the pioneers of the Air Forces in France, was also on board the transport. Several officers had the French War Cross and one of them was Lieutenant Clarence Gill of St. Louis, belonging to the 95th Aero Squadron.

During the heavy weather on April 2 Surgeon Frederick I. Haselton of Athens Ga., performed an operation for appendicitis on Corporal G. Heath of 451 Brackett Street, Brooklyn, which was said to have saved his life.

The Arizonan docked in Bush Stores, South Brooklyn, instead of going to Hoboken.

There were two deaths among the 874 troops which embarked on the transport Roma at Marseilles which were reported yesterday when she docked at the foot of Thirtieth Street, South Brooklyn. They were Private Edward J. York of Milwaukee, Wis., of pneumonia, and Private Charles Gurrer of Wheeling, W. Va., who died of heart disease.

Among the casual officers on the Roma was Captain Charles M. Jones, 6 feet 4 inches tall, who lives at 39 East Twenty-ninth Street, and has the Croix de Guerre for shooting down two German planes when he was with the Lafayette Escadrille. Lieutenant C. Z. Overstreet of 133 North Seventh Avenue, Mount Vernon, N. Y., who was with the 302d Engineers, said that the casualties were more than 70 per cent., as they were almost continually under shellfire behind the front lines.

The transport Wilhelmina from Bordeaux with 1,721 troops on board arrived off Sandy Hook last night and will dock at Pier 1, Hoboken, at 11 A. M. today.

MUSTERED OUT RAPIDLY.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., April 4.—The 21,000 officers and men of the 27th Division, who were paid off as they were being mustered out during the last five days, received something like $2,225,000. Not a man drew less than $90, sixty of which was his bonus, and the non-commissioned officers and those with back pay due got more.

Over the desk where two clerks paid the men was a sign which read:

"Get your pay quickly, beat it, and God bless you."

Every man in the division read it, for it was his cue to assist the paymaster in the quickest work of its kind he ever performed here. The men received their money as rapidly as four in ten seconds, for one clerk gave to each the silver in one hand as the notes were thrust at him by another. The men received their discharges at the railroad station so they would entrain by companies and save confusion.

ACCUSES ARMY PHYSICIANS.

Chief Surgeon Says Medical Officers Were Grossly Careless.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Charges of gross carelessness and negligence in preventing and controlling the spread of typhoid and paratyphoid fevers in the army are made against many medical officers serving with the forces overseas in a circular published by the chief surgeon of the American Expeditionary Forces and made public here today by the Public Health Service in connection with a warning that vaccination does not give complete immunity from typhoid.

The Chief Surgeon cites many instances where epidemics prevailed among troops, especially during the last offensives on the western front, and points out that the occurrence and distribution of diseases was constantly brought to the attention of the medical officers through weekly bulletins.

"It would appear," the circular continues, "that many officers utterly failed to grasp the significance of these reports and warnings, a fact which may be due to a false sense of security under the popular belief that vaccination against typhoid and paratyphoid gives complete immunity even in the midst of gross unsanitary conditions.

"Notwithstanding the fact that typhoid and paratyphoid fevers are epidemic in the United States and in spite of our extensive experience with these diseases during the Spanish-American war, and later during the period of mobilization on the Mexican border, it is evident that many medical officers have gained but little knowledge of the fundamental principles underlying prevention and control. It is also quite evident that some medical officers are grossly careless and neglectful of their duties and responsibilities as medical officers and sanitarians."

In a brief review of the occurrence of typhoid and paratyphoid fevers in the expeditionary forces, the chief surgeon says that until June, 1918, few cases occurred and the rate was within the expected limits. From then on, however, it appears the disease spread through many units. During the Château-Thierry offensive, the circular discloses, approximately 75 per cent of the troops engaged were afflicted with diarrheal diseases, such as simple diarrhea, bacillary dysentery, typhoid and paratyphoid. "The high incidence of intestinal diseases in this sector," the chief surgeon says, "was due to entire disregard of the rules of sanitation."

Both dysentery and typhoid-paratyphoid fevers were demonstrated to have prevailed to some extent after the St. Mihiel offensive, but the epidemics of pneumonia and influenza prevailing at that time overshadowed all other medical admissions.

first contingent of selective service men marched down Fifth Avenue after they had been at Camp Upton a while, the problem of the draft boards was largely solved. Residents of the east side looked at the paraders and said: 'If that is what the army will do for our sons, all right, we will urge them to go to the draft boards.'

"At that time Secretary of War Baker realized that the parade was an adjunct to the building up of the National Army. He was willing enough then that the parade should be held. Is it right for the War Department to forbid the parade now after the men have fulfilled the trust put in them? If there is no other alternative we will take up the matter by cable with President Wilson."

Declaring that to abandon the parade would be the source of great unrest, Mr. Field said after the conference with Senator Wadsworth, that a mass meeting of all the Selective Draft Boards in the city would be held next week on a day to be announced later. Mr. Field spoke of the interest of the people of the east side in the parade, and said it would be a bitter disappointment to them if the event was called off.

Appeals to Auxiliaries.

The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, Chairman of the Home Auxiliary Association, wrote a letter to each of the auxiliaries in the association urging them to call public meetings to give expression to the sentiment of the relatives and friends of the men in the division. He asked them to leave no stone unturned to secure the assurance of the War Department that the parade would be held.

The auxiliary of the 302d Ammunition Train has already taken action, and through its Executive Committee issued the following statement to the public: "The Home Association of the 302d Ammunition Train, which is composed of the families of the men of that train, has heard that the present policy of the War Department will probabyl prevent a parade in New York of the 77th Division as a unit. Members of the Home Association have been looking forward to such a parade as a fitting welcome, and they are keenly disappointed at the present project. Moreover, relatives of War Department will probably prevent tion of the parade would be an injustice, not only to the men themselves but also to their mothers, wives and sisters who have been long awaiting their return."

The Welcome Committee for the Jewish Boys Returning From the War joined with the Mayor's Committee in protesting against the attitude of the War Department, and sent the following telegram to Secretary of War Baker:

> The Welcome Committee for the Jewish Boys Returning from the War keenly regrets the decision that there shall not be a parade of the 77th Division. The East Side, which has contributed so large a quota to this division, is stirred at being deprived of the opportunity to pay tribute to the heroism and bravery of the boys of the 77th Division. We strongly urge you to do everything within your power to make it possible that the parade shall take place. It will be an act of patriotism.

The committee also sent this telegram to the Secretary of the Treasury, Carter Glass:

> The Welcome Committee for the Jewish Boys Returning from the War considers the decision that there shall be no parade of the 77th Division an error of judgment. The failure of the authorities to give the east side an opportunity to welcome and entertain its heroes might react most unfavorably. The people on the east side are intensely patriotic and have shown it not only in sending their boys willingly to the front, but in their subscriptions to the Liberty Loans. We urge your good offices to the end that the parade shall take place.

Goes Ahead with Plans.

The Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee, through Congressman Delaney, announced that an appeal would be made to the War Department to sanction the parade. Meanwhile the committee will proceed with its tentative plans for the parade and reception to the men of the division.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman of the Temple Emanu-el, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, who has been a leader in the welfare work among the Jewish members of the 77th Division, issued a statement to the public, in which he said in part:

"Speaking for the Jewish members of the division, I can say that they felt it an honor of the highest kind to be called to the colors under the Selective Service act. Here is something new in American history. The United States wanted a man to fight for its principles. It pointed to that particular man and said, 'We want you to fight for us.' The man responded and fought with zeal and courage.

"Is it not reasonable that the relatives and friends should want to see our New York men parade in New York City when they arrive? Every parade is symbolic of peace, of victory, of rejoicing over the return of those who escaped disaster, and every parade is a silent tribute to the memory of those buried soldiers whose achievements are an example in the devotion of duty to the youth of our land."

Resolutions expressing the opinion that the 77th Division should be allowed to parade were passed last night at a meeting of the Home Auxiliary of the 308th Infantry, held in the Engineers' Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. Lieut. Col. Charles W. Whittlesey of the Lost Battalion, a part of the 308th, presided.

BAKER FAVORS PARADE.

Hopes to be Able to Facilitate Return of Troops.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—It was impossible today to obtain a clear and definite statement from the War Department as to whether the 77th Division, composed of drafted men from New York City, will be permitted to parade as a unit upon their return from abroad. Secretary Baker said that the division would return as a divisional unit and that if it were "humanly" possible to do so, the men of the division would be permitted to parade as a division, as desired by the people of New York.

The statement was made, however, by officers in the department, that under the policy now in vogue, of trying to bring about the demobolization of men as quickly as possible after their return, it was doubtful whether the men of the 77th would be able to parade as a whole, unless all the men in the division wanted to be held together for such a parade.

General March last Saturday stated that he had found on his tour of the country that soldiers in the camps ready for demobolization were in many instances objecting to parades and preferred immediate demobolization to being held. It was this which led to the issuance of his instructions for the demobolization of individual soldiers within forty-eight hours after they reached camp wherever that was possible. In view of the conflicting statements heard in the War Department today it was impossible to obtain a definite idea of what the ultimate attitude of the department will be toward the parading of the 77th Division.

WASHINGTON, April 4. (by Associated Press.)—The War Department has no disposition, Secretary Baker said today, to oppose efforts in New York City to arrange there for a divisional review of the 77th Division. On the contrary, he said, he was strongly in favor of the parading of the division or any substantial part of it that might arrive in such order that the review would be possible without congesting the demobilization facilities to the detriment of the demobilization of other units.

Lieut. Col. Douglas Campbell of the 77th Division called on the Secretary today to discuss the parade question, and Mr. Baker outlined to him the difficulties that must be surmounted by the military authorities in France if the review is to be made possible. The Colonel said the embarkation officials on the other side had promised to make every effort to compress shipments of the 77th into so short a period of time that the review could be carried through without serious congestion of the camps around New York.

FOUGHT WITH BRITISH.

Mauretania Bringing Many Who Enlisted Before U. S. Entered War.

The Cunard transport Mauretania, which left Brest on April 2 with Vice Admiral Sims and 1,000 American troops, has also 115 officers, 2,639 men, and three nurses, American and British subjects, who enlisted in the British Army before this country entered the war.

The British Consul in New York was trying to make arrangement yesterday to get an armory or some large place to accommodate these ex-soldiers on arrival until they can be sent to their respective homes in various parts of the United States. The Mauretania, which has also a number of civilians in her first cabin, is not expected to arrive here before Monday morning. She is coming direct from Brest and will not call at Halifax, the Cunard officials said last night. Jacob Dehaas, executive secretary of the Zionist Organization of America, is expected on the Mauretania from the Interallied Zionist Conference in London.

42D IS ALL PACKED UP.

Division Awaits Final Orders to Move Toward Home.

COBLENZ, April 3, (Associated Press.)—The 42d Division is all packed up and awaiting the final order, "All aboard for home." The first train with troops from this division on board is scheduled to leave Ahrweiler Sunday morning. The personnel on this train will consist of the Division Headquarters Staff and several smaller units. Two trains will leave Sunday afternoon, and four daily thereafter for six days. The transportation officers figure on an average time schedule from the Rhine to Brest of sixty hours.

SAY BLANQUET HAS VIOLATED OUR LAWS

Carranza's Representatives Here Argue United States Should Act Against Him.

HE WIRES THAT ALL IS WELL

Revolutionary Army Said to be Near Vera Cruz—Denial That Villa Will Co-operate.

The representatives of President Venustiano Carranza in New York expressed the view yesterday that the United States Government should proceed criminally against General Aurelio Blanquet and his associates in the new Mexican revolution under Section 13 of the Espionage act. This act makes it an offense punishable by a fine of $3,000 or imprisonment for three years for any person or group of persons to organize on American territory an expedition against a country with which the United States is at peace. The representatives of General Blanquet, on the other hand, contended that the statute did not apply in this case for the reason "that the revolution was not organized in the United States, but in Mexico."

The Consul General of Mexico in New York is Senor Selinas, who is a brother-in-law of President Carranza. He declined to comment, yesterday, on the situation created in Mexico as a result of the activities of the Blanquet-Diaz movement. It is understood that he is awaiting instructions from Mexico City before issuing any detailed statement.

The following cablegram from General Blanquet was received yesterday at 320 Broadway, which is the office of Pedro del Villar and Roberto Gayon, the personal representatives of General Blanquet:

"I am perfectly safe and entirely satisfied with the situation. Do not worry about anything. BLANQUET."

The message was dated April 3. The place from which it was sent, presumably in code, was not disclosed.

In the statement made by an official of the Carranza Government, he denounced General Blanquet as a reactionary of the worst type and connected his name with the plot that the late Victoriano Huerta is alleged to have hatched with the Germans to start a revolution in Mexico in 1915. It also accused him of responsibility for the assassination of President Francisco Madero, and ended with the charge that the Diaz-Blanquet revolution was a violation of the espionage laws of this country.

"I understand," said this official when seen at the Mexican Consulate General's office in the Tribune Building, "that General Blanquet said on his departure from New York that he would see his friends next either in Mexico or in eternity. That is the phrase he used according to the reports printed today in the leading New York morning papers. General Blanquet said, we are informed, that he was departing for a trip to the West Indies, and thence to Mexico, in order to launch what is reported to be the greatest armed movement against the Government of Venustiano Carranza, a Government, by the way, legally acknowledged by the Government of the United States.

"These gentlemen represent themselves as loving friends of the Allied cause. They pretend to be the redeemers of law and order, through such exquisitely adapted instruments for that purpose as Felix Diaz, Huerta's ex-envoy to Japan; Emiliano Zapata, the man who held in a state of barbarism the region he used to control in Morelos; Francisco Villa, the famous raider of the border towns, and other disturbing elements in the Republic of Mexico, who we know by experience have always tended to maintain that unfortunate nation in continuous anxiety and lawlessness, wherever they are found.

"The activities of Mr. Blanquet and his associates, I believe, constitute an offense which the laws of the United States penalize and should be taken into account by the proper authorities, because they mean, in intention and in fact, an hostility toward a nation diplomatically and otherwise on friendly terms with the United States of America."

At 320 Broadway, Mr. Villar and Mr. Gayon said they had received scores of messages during the day in which the senders expressed their well wishes for the success of the Blanquet-Diaz revolution. Some of these messages came, it was said, from some of the best known men in New York.

"How near are the Blanquet-Diaz forces to Vera Cruz City?" Mr. Gayon was asked.

"Our information is that the main force is not more than twenty-five miles away," was his reply. "We have been unofficially informed that our outposts are now within ten miles of the city, which is held by about 3,500 men. We are expecting a contact between our forces and the Carranzistas any day now. We will, of course, need a great deal of ammunition and other supplies. We hope that we will be permitted to get them. Our movement is backed by an army in being, which was organized and equipped in Mexico, and we believe we are entitled to all the rights of a belligerent force. Whether or not we shall be permitted to purchase arms and ammunition in this country, of course, depends on the attitude of the Government in Washington. We have in the past and will continue in the future to scrupulously live up to the laws of this country in all matters."

"What about Villa? The Carranzistas allege that he is allied with the Blanquet-Diaz faction?"

"That is absolutely false. He is in no way connected with the movement and will not be permitted to align himself with us."

Mr. Gayon added that his advices were that Carranza realized the strength of the movement against him and already was sending a part of his fortune into Salvador for safekeeping.

WILSON PROMISES TO HELP FILIPINOS

pine Islands; not an Americanization of the islands, but the growth of a Philippine civilization. It is normal that people should desire to be free and independent.

"The Philippine Islands are almost independent; your Legislatures govern the islands. The strongest tie between the Philippine Islands and the United States at present is this tie of affection of which I speak, rather than the political. I know that I express the feeling of the President, I certainly express my own feeling. I think I express the prevailing feeling in the United States when I say the time has substantially come, if not quite come, when the Philippine Islands can be allowed to sever the more formal political tie remaining and become an independent people, and I trust as you go about the United States and address audiences you will not hesitate to paint the picture of the past relations betwen the people of the United States and the Filipino, of the progress which you have made, the extent to which your islands are self-governing and the almost exclusive extent to which the officers of the executive administration are filled by the native sons of your own islands.

"I am myself in favor of Philippine independence. I trust the day is very close at hand when it can be formally accomplished and when it will no longer be necessary for your children in your public schools to write essays and make orations on the aspirations of your people, but when the theme of those essays and the theme of those orations can be one of appreciation of a fact accomplished, and all the energy of your people can be devoted to the further development of the fine civilization which is already inaugurated there.

"America is proud of the Philippine Islands, and her pride will increase, rather than cease, when they cease to be her political possession and become her political sister in the sisterhood of nations."

Francis Burton Harrison, Governor General of the Philippines, expressed sentiments identical with those voiced by Secretary Baker. The formal act granting independence, he said, was one that Congress must take up, and the Administration would present the matter to Congress at the appropriate time. From his own experience in two months' stay at home, he added, he could assure the mission that the objection to Filipino independence that seemed to prevail in the United States a few years ago had greatly diminished, if it had not virtually vanished.

The Filipino Memorial.

In presenting the formal memorial asking for complete independence, Senor Quezon said in part:

"Independence is the great national ideal of the Filipino country, and we believe this is the proper time to present the question, looking to a favorable and decisive action, because of the declared and uniform policy of America to withdraw her sovereignty over the Phillipines and to recognize our independence as soon as a stable government has been established. There now is a stable government and the fulfillment of this solemn promise you owe to yourselves, to us and to humanity at large.

"You have truly treated us as no nation ever before has treated another under its sway, and yet you—and none better than you—will understand why, even under such conditions, our people still crave independence, that they, too, may be sovereign masters of their own destinies."

The Philippines have had self-government since Oct. 16, 1916. By act of Congress, approved Aug. 29, 1916, better known as the Jones bill, the old Philippine Commission was abolished, there being substituted as the Upper House of the Legislature a Senate, composed of twenty-four members, and, instead of the Assembly, a House of Representatives of ninety members, all elected at triennial elections, excepting two Senators and nine Representatives appointed by the Governor General to represent the non-Christian provinces.

The political attitude of the present Administration was set forth in the preamble to the Jones bill, which declared "it was never the intention of the people of the United States in the incipiency of the war with Spain to make it a war of conquest or for territorial aggrandizement," that "it has always been the purpose of the people of the United States to withdraw their sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize their independence as soon as a stable government can be established therein," and that "for the speedy accomplishment of such purpose it is desirable to place in the hands of the people of the Philippines as large a control of their domestic affairs as can be given them without, in the meantime, impairing the exercise of the rights of sovereignty by the people of the United States, in order that, by the use and exercise of popular franchise and governmental powers, they may be the better prepared to fully assume the responsibilities and enjoy all the privileges of complete independence."

SCOUTS DESIGNS BY JAPAN.

President of Philippines Senate Denies Alarmist Reports.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Denial of recent reports that Japanese were going into the southern part of Mindanao in large numbers was made today by Manuel L. Quezon, former resident Commissioner of the Philippine Islands in the United States in Washington and now President of the Senate of the Philippine Government, who today presented to Secretary Baker the appeal of the Filipinos for independence.

In an interview Señor Quezon discussed the relations of the Philippines and Japan, saying he could assure the people of this country that the statesmen now in control in Japan have no imperialistic designs against the Philippines.

"Recent sensational reports that the Japanese were pouring into the southern islands of the Philippine group are not true," he said today. "There has been no pronounced increase even in the normal flow of Japanese to and from the different islands. And I can assure the people of one thing about which there have been many alarms during the last few years—the modern Japanese, the statesmen who are in control of the Japanese Government, have no imperialistic designs upon the Philippines. Of that I am certain. And there are adequate reasons for this that are fully appreciated by the Japanese themselves. Chief of these is that the Japanese realize that the Filipinos would not be assimilated even if conquered. We are of a different religion and culture. We are the only important Christian nation in the Far East. The Japanese realize this fact and know that they could not conquer Christianity even if they crushed the people.

"Japan is anxious to extend her commercial relations with us, and undoubtedly will do so. But the United States will always hold its own against all other nations in our commercial relations because of the interests already established, and because of the sentiment in the hearts of the Filipinos for the United States.

"I sincerely believe that the old military party has been defeated for all time in Japan. I have talked with many Japanese of all classes on this and kindred subjects, and I find the same thought among them all. Of course, there are the leaders of the old military organization left, and they may threaten and make much noise, but their power is gone.

"The war opened the eyes of the Japanese in regard to the United States. I have it from many different Japanese sources. The Japanese Government did not believe the United States could or would fight, even though they were aligned on the same side in the war. But the rapidity with which the United States organized its forces, the unanimity of sentiment in America on the war, and the might behind the blow that the United States struck for liberty for the world surprised the Japanese statesmen. Formerly the Japanese one would meet in traveling in the Far East had a cockiness of air that said, 'We can fight the world. We can whip any nation, even Great Britain or the United States,' and one sometimes heard the feeling expressed in words.

"Now the Japanese statesmen know that Japan cannot single-handed defeat the world, and they have no desire to try. With the downfall of the military party the entire Japanese nation has turned its mind to commercial expansion."

BRITISH PAY TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN DEAD

Memorial Service for Our Soldiers Who Fell in War Is Held at Westminster Abbey.

LONDON, April 4.—A memorial service for Americans who fell during the war was held at Westminster Abbey at noon today under the auspices of the English Speaking Union. A large number of Americans, including detachments from the army and navy, attended.

The service opened with the hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past," followed by special prayers by the Right Rev. H. E. Ryle, Dean of Westminster, who, in an address, said:

"Let us unite in thanking God for those, our brothers of the great American Republic, who have laid down their lives in a sacred and righteous cause. Their deaths are sealed by an unwritten but inviolable covenant, our common brotherhood. Their deaths have laid enduring foundations of the hopes of the world for a future peace.

"For their sakes we raise this day our proud thanksgiving in this great abbey which enshrines the illustrious dust of English speaking peoples. Let us render humble and joyful praise to Almighty God that in response to the clarion call of freedom and justice the two commonwealths have not divided, nor have the brothers of America laid down their lives in vain.

"May America and Great Britain go forward charged with the privilege of the common stewardship of the liberties of mankind."

The Battle Hymn of the Republic and the American and British national anthems were sung and, while the congregation was still standing, the plaintive notes of a bugle in some far off recess of the abbey sounded taps.

Among those present were Ambassador and Mrs. Davis, Consul General and Mrs. Skinner, Major Gen. Biddle, Rear Admiral Robinson, the staffs of the American Embassy and the American Consulate General and representatives of the British War, Navy and Air Offices. Queen Mother Alexandra was represented by the Marquis of Cambridge and King George by his A. D. C., Colonel Burt. Premier Lloyd George was represented by Sir William Sutherland.

Others present were Walter H. Long, First Lord of the Admiralty; Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary of State for War, Viscount Bryce, Viscount Peel, Under Secretary of State for War; Sir George Perley, Canadian High Commissioner in London; the Greek Minister in London, the Earl of Meath and Major Gen. J. E. B. Seely.

BIG STRIKE STARTS AT KRUPP WORKS

Clash on Wage Demands Followed by General Decision of the Men to Quit.

MORE RUHR MINERS OUT

Empress Augusta Regiment Disarmed by German Government for Disloyalty.

BERLIN, April 3, (Associated Press.)—A general strike has begun at the Krupp works, where the employes cannot agree with the employers on the question of wages, according to a report from Essen. The men declare that they will stay out until their demands have been conceded.

From Frankfort comes word that the situation has quieted down. An investigation of the damage done shows that vast quantities of valuable legal papers were burned and the archives were destroyed. A house-to-house search resulted in the recovery of large quantities of stolen goods.

The Government of Württemberg has announced that the strike in that section of Germany has suddenly collapsed, according to a telegram from Stuttgart, and has, therefore, requested bourgeois counterstrikers to resume work. Farmers joined in the counterstrike and Stuttgart was in consequence almost without milk today, receiving only 80 litres instead of 8,000, the usual quantity.

Eight thousand striking workmen at Duisburg, Rhenish Prussia, have refused to resume their labors until an adequate food supply has been provided.

Mine Stock for Workers.

The S. Bleichroeder Banking Company of this city, which owns nearly all the shares of the great Oppeln mine, at Oppeln, Silesia, has arranged to turn over its stock to members of the Miners Union at par. This mine, if the arrangement is carried out, will become the first in Germany to be owned by the employes.

The military authorities late today began disarming the Empress Augusta Regiment, which had become infected with Spartacide ideas. Up to 6:30 o'clock the disarming had proceeded without incident.

The regiment, which had repeatedly shown itself untrustworthy, resisted an attempt to convert it into a unit of the national defense force. Its barracks in Furstenstrasse was surrounded by Government troops today. Artillery was brought up, the neighborhood of the barracks cut off from outside communication, and machine guns were placed on adjoining roofs. The loyal troops then began to disarm the regiment.

ESSEN, April 3, (Associated Press.)—Despite would-be quieting reports, the strike situation in the Ruhr district has grown distinctly worse in the last twenty-four hours, until now about half the entire mine personnel is out. The number of men out increased late yesterday afternoon and early today from 58,000 to 110,000.

A few mines are still operating in the Bochum district. Many of the mines are threatened with "drowning" because even emergency work has ceased.

French Saw Frankfort Rising.

COBLENZ, April 3, (Associated Press.)—The Spartacide uprising in Frankfort, to which city German Government troops had been ordered, occurred virtually within sight of soldiers of the Tenth French Army, who occupy the western suburbs, but were powerless to act owing to the fact that Frankfort proper is just over the Mayence bridgehead line. So far as known here, no French troops have entered Frankfort, although requests were made that they should do so.

According to American medical officers who have been in Frankfort recently for the purpose of buying surgical instruments, there has been much gayety in the city since the armistice was signed. All the afternoon and far into the night the cafés are filled with people who became wealthy because of the war.

There was apparently plenty of food, but the prices were very high at hotels and restaurants. The Americans say they heard a different story regarding food from that told in districts where the poor classes live.

Many all night balls have been the feature of life in Frankfort, and newspapers have devoted much space to descriptions of what they called "riotous living." Ministers, too, have preached in an endeavor to stem the tide of gayety which began last November, and has increased among the wealthy.

The American surgeons who visited Frankfort did so with the permission of General Mangin, commander of the French forces in that district. They entered the city in an automobile, which carried the white flag.

COLOGNE, April 4.—The general strike ordered by the Spartacides in the adjacent German districts has not been a complete success, notably among the miners.

The anniversary of Bismarck's birth, April 1, was celebrated at many places, but at Duisburg the Social Democrats and the Communists refused to allow the speaker to deliver his address. Because of the disorder that ensued the police cleared the hall.

HONOR DOMINICAN SAINT.

Fifth Centenary of St. Vincent Ferrer Celebrated Here.

The celebration of the fifth centenary of St. Vincent Ferrer, who was a member of the Dominican Order, was begun yesterday by Pontifical Mass in the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, 871 Lexington Avenue. The celebration will last until Sunday. There will be a Pontifical Mass at 10 o'clock celebrated by Archbishop John Bonzano, the Papal Delegate. The 11 o'clock mass will be celebrated by Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes. The sermon will be preached by Bishop John T. McNicholas of Duluth.

Mass yesterday was celebrated by Bishop John J. O'Connor of Newark, assisted by the Rev. J. P. Masterson as deacon and the Rev. William Corrigan as subdeacon. Mgr. John P. Chidwick, President of St. Joseph's Seminary at Dunwoodie, who preached, drew his lesson from the conditions that existed five centuries ago when St. Vincent Ferrer went forth to preach to nations struggling under unrest and civic turmoil.

Defeat Measure Allowing Election to Chamber Without Sex Distinction.

PARIS, April 3.—The Chamber of Deputies considered the Electoral Reform bill today, two woman suffrage amendments being submitted. The first was presented by Henry Roulleaux-Dugage, and provided that members of the Chamber of Deputies would be elected without distinction of sex. This was defeated when it was stricken out of the bill on the ground that there was insufficient time for discussion, the vote being 302 to 187.

The second amendment was submitted by Louis Andrieux, and provided for the transmission of the right to vote to the next relatives of heads of families without distinction of sex. It was pointed out that it would insure family representation, and was needed because many heads of families had been killed during the war. It was defeated by a vote of 335 to 134.

LONDON, April 4.—The second reading of the Women's Emancipation bill was moved in the House of Commons today by William Adamson, Chairman of the Labor Party and leader of the Opposition. Mr. Adamson explained that the object of the bill was to remove certain restrictions and disabilities still imposed upon women, to entitle them to hold certain civil and judicial appointments, and to remove the disqualification which prevented women from sitting and voting in the House of Lords. The measure, he said, would give effect to the political and legal equality of men and women. The bill is fathered by the Labor Party.

The House unanimously adopted the second reading. Dr. Christopher Addison, President of the Local Government Board, speaking for the Government, said he could not accept the proposal regarding suffrage which put women on an equality with men, and would propose the deletion of the clause in committee. He accepted the principles contained in the other provisions of the bill, however.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 4.—Application for a receiver for the Chattanooga Railway & Light Company, controlled by the Clark interests of Philadelphia, was filed in the United States District Court here late today by the Commercial Trust Company of Philadelphia, owners of $2,790,000 of first mortgage bonds of the railway. The complainant charges that notwithstanding the net income of the defendant company last year, which was $403,000, it refused to pay interest amounting to $70,000 on the bonds held by the trust company.

John Chaloner on His Way Here.

REFUSES TO DEAL WITH B. R. T. UNION

TALK OF STRIKE FOLLOWS

Union Leader Says Controversy Will Be Considered by Committee Tonight.

B.R.T.'S EXECUTIVES CONFER

Statement of Receiver's Attitude Issued After Lengthy Consultation of Executives.

Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the B. R. T. System refused yesterday to recognize the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes as the representation of the employes of the system, and last night, after his reply to the union representatives became known, there was talk of a strike. The union leaders assert that 85 per cent. of approximately 15,000 employes have enrolled in the union.

A secret meeting of the union committee of Division 867, which includes the B. R. T. members, was called at the Hotel Continental last night, but P. J. O'Brien, International Vice President of the Amalgamated Association, explained later that only one-half the committee members had been notified to appear. Mr. Garrison's refusal to treat with the union will be formally answered tonight at a meeting to be held either at the Labor Lyceum, Willoughby and Myrtle Avenues, Brooklyn, or at the Hotel Continental.

When asked last night whether a strike would be called to enforce recognition of the union, Mr. O'Brien replied:

"We are not going to do that yet. But it is up to the committee in the full meeting to decide what action should be taken. The union represents 85 per cent. of the employes of the B. R. T. system. The workers were encouraged to enroll because of a decision of the War Labor Board. They present almost a united front in all three divisions of the company."

It was pointed out to Mr. O'Brien that Mr. Garrison had been appointed receiver of the elevated and subway lines of the B. R. T. system, but that the surface lines did not come under his control by virtue of the court order.

"There must be some misunderstanding," the union leader replied. "If Mr. Garrison is not the receiver of the surface system, then why should he reply to the demands, submitted as they were by an employe of the B. R. T. surface system?"

The proposed agreement submitted to Mr. Garrison last week and answered yesterday, was adopted at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum on last Friday night by the unionized employes. The demands include, besides recognition of the union, 60 cents an hour for platform men during a nine-hour day, 60 cents for a nine-hour swing during rush hours, 53 cents for blacksmiths and structural workers, 45 cents for shopmen for an eight-hour day, and time and a half for overtime. The demands were submitted in a letter to Mr. Garrison by James Sheridan, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Division 867.

Receiver Garrison's Reply.

Mr. Garrison's reply to the demands follows:

Brooklyn, April 4, 1919.
James Sheridan, 1,713 Gates Avenue,
Brooklyn, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I received yesterday your letter, dated March 29, signed by yourself and sixteen others.

I note you state that you are submitting to me several requests compiled in agreement form, and there was accompanying your letter a draft of the articles of agreement. Such articles are stated to be between the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and all its subsidiaries, "and such employes of the company who are now or may hereafter become members of Division 867 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America."

If the intention is to have the company enter into an agreement with persons who are now or may hereafter become members of a particular division of the above named association as such, I would not in any event contemplate such action. All agreements at any time made with our employes should cover all of the men in similar employment, whether they are members of the union or are not.

You are, of course, aware, as are all the employes of the system, of the attitude of the receiver in respect of the subject matter.

In a notice to all of the employees, dated March 11, 1919, they were all informed as follows:

> In so far as the present management is concerned, these two recommendations of the National War Labor Board sufficiently indicate the policy being followed and to be followed. In other words, no attempt is made to prevent an employe from joining any organization that he pleases, religious, patriotic, benevolent, political, or labor union. On the other hand, the management of the system will, as heretofore, deal with committees of its own employes in all matters affecting the relation of its employes to the system.

> That the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and its subsidiary companies operating street railway lines in New York City give full and free permission to all its employes to organize labor unions in conformity with the announced principles of this board and as a matter of plain right and justice.

The other, of Oct. 24, 1918, as follows:

> Under our principles the company, not being bound otherwise by any contract or agreement with the union, may refuse to see and deal with any committee but one of its own employes.

If, therefore, the employes of the system in any of its branches have any grievances which they desire to have taken up for consideration, or any requests in respect of the conduct of the company toward them or in respect of their employment, I shall be very pleased to have them formulate whatever they desire me to consider, and at a time mutually agreeable I shall be glad, if necessary, to meet a committee of the employes designated to represent such employes in respect of the subject-matter.

I am sure that you will appreciate the reasonableness of the position of the management, and of their desire to deal fairly, fully and equitably with all of the employes, and that this cannot be done excepting by the employes selecting their representatives to deal with the representatives of the management. It would not be consistent with the policy above mentioned, or with the best interests of the employes or the management to take up for consideration the agreement you have submitted, which in form is between the company and its subsidiaries and only members of a particular labor union, and does not include all the employes.

The management will not deal with any outside organization, whether the same be, as mentioned in its notice of March 11, 1919, religious, patriotic, benevolent, political or labor. It will always be ready to deal with its employes directly through committees selected by the employes in respect of any matters of mutual concern to the employes and the management.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
Receiver.

Letter Sent After Conference.

Receiver Garrison wrote the letter to Mr. Sheridan after he had been in conference all day with the operating heads of the B. R. T. departments at the company offices, 85 Clinton Street, Brooklyn. At these conferences were Colonel Timothy S. Williams, former President of the company; Frederick P. Royce, General Manager for the receiver; John J. Dempsey, Vice President; W. Seibert, Superintendent of surface lines; C. L. Crabbs, way and structure engineer; W. G. Grove, Equipment Superintendent; L. Van Cott, purchasing agent, and C. D. Meneley.

The letter was delivered at Mr. Sheridan's home shortly before 5 o'clock, while the member of the union's Divisional Committee was still at work. Mr. O'Brien said last night that when Mr. Sheridan reached home he sent the missive to the union leader at the Continental.

"The letter did not reach me until 7 o'clock, and therefore I did not know for certain that the receiver of the B. R. T. had definitely refused recognition of the union," added Mr. O'Brien. "I had intended to make a statement at the close of the session of the Executive Committee, but it would be impossible for me to make a statement for only eleven of the twenty-two members of the committee, without meeting with disagreement on the part of some one of the members. Therefore it has been decided to hold a meeting either at the Continental or in Brooklyn tomorrow night.

"At this meeting a reply to the receiver will be drafted, and I think, made public. The members of this Executive Committee have been in the employ of the B. R. T. system for periods varying from eighteen years to nine months. These men should be considered representatives of the employes of the system."

CAPITAL AND LABOR GETTING TOGETHER

British Industrial Conference at Harmonious Meeting Gets Committee Report.

BOTH SIDES WELCOME IT

Lloyd George, in Letter, Says Result Shows What Sincerity and Good-Will Can Accomplish.

LONDON, April 4.—An optimistic view of the work of the Industrial Conference, comprising representatives of the employers and the trade unions of the United Kingdom, was expressed at a joint meeting of that body held today to discuss a secret report made by the Committee of Ten that had been appointed to make recommendations as to an adjustment of the outstanding difficulties.

Sir Robert Stevenson Horne, Minister of Labor, who presided, read a letter from Premier Lloyd George upon the report of the committee. In it the Premier said he welcomed the report because it showed what could be done when the workmen and employers discussed problems in a spirit of sincerity and with the determination to find a peaceful solution.

"The industrial question is perhaps the greatest of all the problems with which we are faced," the letter continues. "There is not a cut-and-dried or a rough-and-ready method of solving it. Its solution will be worked out gradually and as a result of the co-operation of all classes, having as their object not self-interest, but the creation of a better country for all to live in.

"For more than four years we have been manifesting this co-operation in the great task of freeing Europe from military autocracy. Let us go on and manifest it in the not less important task of freeing Great Britain from poverty, unemployment, and political unrest."

Arthur Henderson, the labor leader, moved a resolution welcoming the report of the committee and agreed to submit it for acceptance. The Government, Mr. Henderson said, had declared its readiness to proceed at once with legislation and other steps necessary to carry the recommendations into effect. He added that the provisional joint committee would remain intact until a national industrial council and a standing committee were brought into being.

Sir Allan Smith, representing the Engineering Employers' Federation, seconded the resolution on behalf of the employers. He said the details of the report would be observed strictly, both in letter and spirit, and that he had no doubt as to the future of the industries of the country.

The resolution was carried.

Minister of Labor Horne promised that the report would receive sympathetic consideration by the Government.

The report, it is understood, recommended the following immediate reforms:

Trade boards for organized trades.

The wages and hours recognized and agreed on by the trade unions and the employers to be applied to all other workers and employers.

Trade conferences to be held on future war bonuses, the maintenance of the unemployed and old age pensions.

Separate meetings of the trade unionists and the employers were being held this afternoon to consider the report.

STRIKER SHOT IN RIOT.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, April 4.—The Forstmann & Huffmann woolen mill in Garfield was attacked by strikers this morning and the disorder, which lasted until the police cleared the streets, resulted in the shooting of one striker. For a time it looked as though there would be a more serious clash, but the police, reinforced by special Deputy Sheriffs, dispersed the troublemakers. Many windows were broken on the company's property by stones thrown from outside the surrounding fence.

Strikers began early to gather about the gates and at the time for the mill to open about 1,000 men and some women had appeared, so the 150 Deputy Sheriffs were turned out to guard the property. The trouble began when a striker threw a stone at the building that houses the Deputy Sheriffs, just inside the fence. The stone was the signal for a volley and every window in the place was broken before the police could charge the crowd. There was a lively fight for a time and more windows were broken before the crowd was finally dispersed.

ACQUIT WRECK MOTORMAN.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 4.—Edward Luciano, motorman of the B. R. T. train in the Malbone Street tunnel disaster, was acquitted of manslaughter at 11:29 o'clock tonight after the jury had been out nearly five hours. The prisoner was at once discharged by Justice Seeger.

While waiting for the jury to reach a verdict the defendant, with his brother, Michael Luciano, a Chief Quartermaster in the United States Navy, appeared rather nervous as he paced up and down the hall adjoining the courtroom. His wife with her baby had returned to their home in Brooklyn after the case went to the jury at 6:40 o'clock.

When the trial of Luciano was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning the prosecuting attorney announced that he would offer little testimony in rebuttal.

In his summing up for the defendant Judge Smith made a sympathetic appeal to the jury and begged them not to cast the sins of the B. R. T. on his client, whom he alluded to frequently as "that boy."

TO HELP FIND MEN JOBS.

Louis Freidenthal of the naval ship Bradford, who is a member of the Soldiers' and Sailors' and Marines' Protective Association, asked the Central Federated Union, at the meeting of delegates last night, to assist in finding employment for men discharged from the Government's fighting forces. Feidenthal said the unemployment situation was acute, yet the men had refused to put themselves in the way of interference with organized union labor in seeking jobs, and preferred to co-operate with the labor organizations. Soldiers, sailors and marines had been offered paying positions by various boat owners during the harbor strike of marine workers, he said, but had declined to act as strike breakers. The delegates promised to aid in the employment of the ex-military men.

The proposed measure for increasing street railway and subway fares was denounced by Benjamin Howe, a delegate from the American Labor Party. A resolution was adopted, authorizing the Executive Committee of the federation to appeal to the Mayor and the Governor and the Legislature for an investigation of high rents.

FUEL SHIP FOR FLIERS.

To be Stationed on Transocean Route of Navy Planes.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Besides the destroyers which will patrol the course to be mapped for the naval seaplanes in their proposed flight across the Atlantic Ocean in May a fuel ship, probably the Melville, will be stationed somewhere along the route so that if necessary the planes can take on fuel at sea.

Acting Secretary Roosevelt said today that the route had not been selected, that if it were decided to fly direct to Ireland the fuel ship would meet the planes in midocean, and that if the course were via the Azores the rendezvous would be somewhere between those islands and the starting point.

Some officers believe the machines to make the flight would be able to carry sufficient fuel for a nonstop flight, but adverse winds or bad weather might so reduce the speed of the craft that they would be forced to replenish their supply. If they do stop for fuel, the planes will ride on the water while loading. This would be a rather dangerous operation, particularly in a choppy sea, and for that reason those in charge of preparations for the flight hope a stop at the fuel ship will not be necessary.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 3.—The Short brothers, who have entered an airplane for the transatlantic flight, have selected the Limerick district as the starting point for Newfoundland.

EDDY CHURCH WANTS CONTROL OF PAPERS

INTERPRET FOUNDER'S WISH

Directors Maintain She Never Intended That Publication Should Be Separated from Church.

BOSTON, April 4.—The Directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in their answer to the bill in equity brought by the Trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society last month, seeking to have the Directors restrained from interfering with the conduct of the society by the trustees, declare that the Board of Directors at all times "in fact have exercised supervisory control over the affairs of the publishing society, and such control has never been questioned by the trustees until recently." The answer was filed in the State Supreme Court late today. The court issued a temporary injunction on March 25, pending a hearing.

The Trustees are Herbert W. Eustice of Boston, David B. Ogden of Brookline, and Lamond Rowlands of Picayune, Miss. The Directors joining in the answer are Adam H. Dickey, James A. Neal, and Edward A. Merritt of Brookline, William R. Rathvon, and Mrs. Annie M. Knott of Boston. John V. Dittemore, who was named as a defendant, did not sign the answer, in which it was stated that on March 17 last, Dittemore "ceased to be a Director" and was succeded by Mrs. Knott.

The bill of complaint said that the other Directors had removed Dittemore and appointed Mrs. Knott, "claiming to act under authority to do so," and that the plaintiffs did not know whether Dittemore or Mrs. Knott "is not the duly appointed trustee."

The answer, after enumerating the changes in the Board of Trustees appointed in 1898 by Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Christian Science movement, whereby the membership of the board has become entirely different from that originally appointed, asserts that L. Rowlands "ceased to be a trustee" on March 17 last. It declares that the deed of trust contains no provisions for resignations of trustees, and that none of the changes in trusteeship occurred as a result of "any decree of any court," and adds:

"If at the instance of the plaintiffs, it be held that said deed of trust is a complete instrument within itself and incapable of being modified or amended by the action of Mary Baker Eddy and the mother church and that the power to declare vacancies in said deed of trust is not vested in the Christian Science Board of Directors, then said defendants aver that none of the plaintiffs ever became trustees under said deed of trust."

The answer says that Mrs. Eddy bequeathed to the mother church, (the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston,) all of the publications of which she was the sole author, "in trust for the promoting and extending of the religion of Christian Science as taught by her." It declares that "the intent and purpose of Mrs. Eddy in the execution of said trust instruments was to make and forever keep the Christian Science Publishing Society * * * an integral part an activity of the mother church."

"During the lifetime of Mrs. Eddy," the answer adds, "her intent and purpose were well understood and fully effectuated. Said defendants deny that it was ever the purpose of Mrs. Eddy to keep the affairs of the publishing society under a separate control and management from that of her church, but, on the contrary, aver her purpose to have been to establish and maintain in the Mother Church a unified form of control over all the agencies and departments engaged in the activities originated by her."

By means of by-laws adopted by the Mother Church, with the approval of Mrs. Eddy, the answer continued, "it was in effect provided that the control and government of the Christian Science Publishing Society and the other Christian Science activities established by her as integral parts of the Mother Church be vested in the Governing Board of said church."

The defendants deny that the plaintiffs "have at all times zealously, conscientiously, and faithfully discharged the duties imposed upon them by the trust and confidence of Mrs. Eddy." They admit that "the financial affairs of said society have, as a whole, been successful," but deny "that the success is the result of the administration of said trust by said present trustees." They deny that the trustees have all worked "for the best interests of the Christian Science Church and the spread of Christian Science throughout the world."

With regard to the allegation in the bill of complaint that more than 1,800 Christian Science churches are in existence and that the defendants are directors of only one of these, the mother church, the answer says that the mother church "is the central organization, of which all the other Christian Science churches and societies are branches."

The answer says that the action of the directors in insisting that the trustees, as a condition of retaining office, acknowledge in writing that the directors had final authority in regard to the editorial policy of the publishing society and general supervision of its affairs, was "required by the duties and responsibilities" imposed upon the directors by the trust deed and the church manual.

The defendants deny that their notice of dismissal sent to Trustee Rowlands was in pursuance of a plan to dominate the publishing society "in derogation of the terms of the trust deed," and say they sent the notice "for reasons which to the Board of Directors, acting in good faith, seemed expedient." They deny the allegation that they have threatened to make the publishing society "an empty shell," and say it has always been their endeavor to promote the business of the society "as an integral activity of the mother church."

EVERARD DIRECTORS REPLY.

Fear of Dry Law Is Voiced in Injunction Answer.

The answer of the Directors of the James Everard Breweries to the suit of Joseph E. Everard and other stockholders for an injunction restraining them from putting into effect a resolution suspending the business on July 1, was filed yesterday in the Federal Court. It was asserted in the action that if the corporation went out of business heavy losses would fall upon the stockholders, and that the brewing of beer containing not more than 2¾ per cent. of alcohol would not be in violation of the law.

The Directors admit that such a resolution as that referred to was adopted by the board on March 13, 1919, and that they refused to comply with a request to continue the business. They deny that this refusal was "wrongful, wasteful, or illegal," but alleged on the contrary:

"The refusal of said demand was made solely because of their desire to avoid exposing themselves or any of them to arrest, indictment, fine, or imprisonment, or any of the other pains, penalties or forfeitures which the various acts of Congress prescribe for violation of the prohibition act."

The defendants to the suit are the corporation, Olga Julia Hilliard, Robert Hilliard, George S. Mittendorf, William M. K. Olcott, and Irving L. Ernst. The law firm of Olcott, Bonynge, McManus & Ernst is counsel for the defendants.

ON TRIAL AS BOLSHEVIST.

Prosecution Closes Case Against Teacher of Brooklyn School.

The trial of Benjamin Glassberg, teacher of history in the Commercial High School, Brooklyn, who is accused of praising Bolshevism and belittling the United States Government in his classroom, was continued yesterday by the Board of Education. A large crowd was present, and a majority of it was demonstrative in the accused teacher's favor. Applause which greeted a rejoinder of his counsel, Gilbert H. Roe, to Assistant Corporation Counsel Mayer caused President Somers to say that if it was repeated the room would be cleared and the hearing continued in private. There were numerous clashes between the opposing counsel.

Mr. Mayer closed the case for the prosecution by calling to the witness stand George Gunsett, Raymond Pamter, Dudley Ross and Frank Silbernagle, members of the class, who testifide to Glassberg's alleged Bolshevist talk in the classroom on Jan. 14, 1919, and George J. Mack, who said that on Dec. 18, 1918, as the history class was breaking up he showed Glassberg a newspaper clipping about Alderman Lee and placing the red flag above the United States flag. Mack said he asked Glassberg's opinion about it and that the latter replied that in a sense he thought it was a good thing.

For the defence Robert Zagorin, Solomon Weinstein, Leo Hodes and Irving Sandler testified that they had not heard Glassberg say anything disrespectful to the United States Government, or constituted authorities of the Board of Education. Mr. Roe announced that it was his intention to call all his pupils in Glassberg's class who had not appeared for the prosecution.

The hearing was postponed until 3 P. M. next Friday.

SAYS ROBINS WAS MISLED.

Gen. Dobrjansky Declares Red Cross Head Had Bolshevist Advisers.

General A. N. Dobrjansky, an aid to the Russian Minister of War before the revolution, told the members of the Technology Club at their meeting at 17 Gramercy Park last night that he believed that Colonel Raymond Robins, head of the Red Cross Mission to Russia, had been misled as to conditions in that country. He criticised Colonel Robins's sources of information, and said that Lenine and Trotzky had been able to influence the opinions formed by the Red Cross Commissioner.

The speaker declared that the Bolsheviki did not control more than one-tenth of the territory of Russia nor more than one-tenth of the population, and "that America could save Russia and save the world from the terrors of Bolshevism by refusing to recognize the Bolshevist Government."

One of the reasons given by General Dobrjansky for his belief that Colonel Robins's conceptions were "highly colored" was that "his dealings with those in authority were through secretaries who were Bolshevist agents, in reality Germans who had changed their names when they came to Russia as internationalists." He declared that the Commissioner had employed a Bolshevist interpreter in his intercourse with the Bolshevist leaders and had as his secretary "a self-confessed Bolshevik, an internationalist of German origin."

"I have known long of Colonel Robins's mystifying intimacy with the purposes of the Lenine and Trotzky propaganda," continued the speaker. "As long as he kept his Bolshevist activities in private channels I could not denounce him, but now that he begins a campaign of propaganda as a private citizen I will have to notify him through the American people that he will have to answer for his unauthorized political acts during his eleven months in Russia."

Major William H. Cressy, an officer of the Franco-Serbian Field Hospital, declared that many foreigners here would now be reading Bolshevist literature.

Off with a punch on cool mornings

How to make 15 to 1 adjustment

Fill the gasoline tank with Tydol and warm up your engine. With the car standing still, the engine running, using the gasoline adjustment on the carburetor, gradually decrease the quantity of gasoline going through the bowl of the carburetor until the engine begins to slow down. Then increase the proportion of gasoline going through until you get a maximum engine speed, but not a fraction further.

With Tydol you will get approximately a 15 to 1 mixture (15 parts air to 1 part gasoline).

The same procedure with low grade gasoline will decrease the proportions to about an 8 to 1 mixture (8 parts air to 1 part gasoline). This means low mileage and excess carbon deposits.

Tydol is made so you can use less fuel and more air.

THERE is nothing so dead as a cold engine on a snappy spring morning. Try the carburetor? Hands and cuffs are dirty in a moment. The train whistles in the distance—comes and goes.

What's the use? Sluggish gasoline simply won't vaporize on cool mornings. Much of it never vaporizes at all. It uses a rich mixture of 8 parts of air to 1 of fuel. It carbons the motor, gums the valves.

Sluggish gasoline costs too much in trouble to be worth worrying over. Fill up the tank with Tydol, the Economy Gasoline. Then you are off with a punch on these cool mornings.

Tydol gasoline vaporizes fast. It is made to run best on the famous lean mixture of 15 parts of air to 1 part gasoline. That gives you touch-and-go starting, rapid acceleration, hill-climbing power. Best of all, watch your speedometer when Tydol is in the tank. You will pile up extra miles on every filling.

Have your dealer make the 15 to 1 carburetor adjustment today. (See at left.) Always keep Tydol in the tank. Then you will know the satisfaction of a snappy, running start every morning. Yet Tydol costs no more than ordinary gasoline. Look for the orange and black Tydol sign.

WILLING TO REVISE PRICES ON STEEL

CONFERENCE POSTPONED

Peek Denies Any Industry Has Been Invited to Enter Into Rate Agreement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The conference at which the differences of opinion that have developed between the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce and the Railroad Administration over the fixing of steel prices by the former were to be discussed, set for today, was postponed until tomorrow because of the absence from the city of Henry Walters, one of the advisers of Director General Hines.

There was a brief conference today between Mr. Hines and Chairman George N. Peek of the Industrial Board, and later Mr. Peek conferred with other members of his board, but nothing of a definite nature resulted. Some hope that an agreement may be reached which will not make futile the Industrial Board's entire program was seen tonight in statements issued by Mr. Peek. In one he denied that he had ever stated that he would not reopen consideration of steel prices. In another he said the Industrial Board had not invited any industry to enter into a price agreement, but simply had suggested a program under which industries voluntarily would make prices as low as was justified by conditions.

These statements in a sense meet the two most important objections made by the Railroad Administration and by Secretary Glass of the Treasury.

The first statement of Mr. Peek, issued early this evening, read:

"George N. Peek, Chairman of the Industrial Board, tonight denied statements attributed to him that the board had adopted hard and fast policies that would not be subject to change under any circumstances.

"'I have never said nor intimated that the Industrial Board would stand pat on the prices formulated with the steel industry, no matter what objections were brought by other departments,' Mr. Peek asserted. 'Shown good and sufficient reason for doing so, the board will reconsider. With wisdom it could pursue no other course.'

"On the other hand Mr. Peek did say: 'I have but little respect for any man who will not change his mind when convinced he is wrong.'"

The other statement, which is looked upon as of importance because of its possible bearing on the dispute between the Industrial Board and the Railroad Administration, read:

"In view of the dispatch from New Orleans dated April 2 to the effect that the Southern Pine Lumber Manufacturers had declined a proposal of the Industrial Board of the United States Department of Commerce, that they enter into a joint price agreement as a means for stabilizing market conditions, Mr. Peek, Chairman of the Industrial Board, states that neither the Southern Pine Association nor any other representative of industry has ever been invited to enter into a price agreement, but they have been invited to co-operate with the Industrial Board in an effort to stabilize prices by getting industry voluntarily to make prices as low as present cost and labor conditions will justify."

While messages have been sent to President Wilson by both sides in the controversy, it is not generally believed here that he will take a direct part in the negotiations.

Director General Hines appointed as his representatives at tomorrow's conference Henry Walters and ex-Judge Robert S. Lovett, both advisers in purchases and finance. Interstate Commerce Commissioner C. C. McCord also has been asked by Mr. Hines to attend the conference, because of the close relationship which the commission holds to the operation of the railroads. It is probable that Mr. Hines may be present part of the time.

The National Coal Association, representing the big bituminous operators, issued a detailed reply to the Railroad Administration, alleging that discriminatory practices were being pursued. The operators' statement said:

"As evidence of good faith and of fairness to all parties concerned, the coal operators asked that all bids on railroad coal be made public, as is done by every other Government department. This request has been refused, and only information made public as to the price at which the business is finally placed. Despite the Director General's public statement of February 19 that this information would be available to any interested party, it has been refused coal operators and their accredited representatives as late as the 28th day of March on the ground that local representatives of the Railroad Administration have no instructions to give out such information.

"In short, the bituminous coal operators have endeavored to obtain the co-operation of the United States Railroad Administration in an effective manner to deal with a question which they consider of vital interest to the general public. The Industrial Board appears to them to afford a medium by which a practical solution of the difficulties could be obtained with all the rights and interests of the general consumers of coal entirely safeguarded. They are still ready to co-operate with this board and the Director General of Railroads in what to them seems an eminently broad and sensible program to meet an extraordinary condition."

WASHINGTON, April 4, (Associated Press).—Acceptance of the uniform prices was put squarely up to the Navy Department today when bids were opened for 20,000 tons of structural steel.

In compliance with the law, competitive bids were asked, but when they were opened, all were found to be based on the prices announced by the Industrial Board. Department officials declare the principle of uniform prices had neither been accepted nor rejected.

Two more hotels have been added to the holdings of John McE. Bowman, it was announced yesterday at Mr. Bowman's office in the Biltmore. Mr. Bowman is now the owner of these two hotels, the Biltmore, Manhattan, Belmont, Murray Hill and the Commodore.

Associated with Mr. Bowman in the purchase of the Griswold and the Belleview is Earle E. Carley, manufacturer of mineral waters. The committee urges the nomination of a person of suitable qualifications to succeed Surrogate Robert Ludlow Fowler, who retires by reason of the age limit. The pending bill for the appointment of two additional Judges for the Court of General Sessions is disapproved.

PLANS FOR $2,000,000 DRIVE

Phillips Exeter Alumni Also Honor Members Who Served in War.

Plans for a $2,000,000 drive for the development of the Phillips Exeter Academy of New Hampshipe were outlined in an address by Lewis Perry, Principal, at a dinner of the New York Association of the Alumni at the Hotel McAlpin last night. The dinner was in the form of a victory celebration and a memorial to the achievements of the Exeter men in the war. Fully 500 members attended the dinner, which was the largest ever held by the association. After the guests had been seated "The Star-Spangled Banner" was sung. Then a silent toast was drunk to the forty-four Exeter men who died in service, while Kirk Towns sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Arthur H. Lockett, Class of '88, was the toastmaster, and the speakers in addition to Mr. Perry were: Brig. Gen. William A. Bancroft, Class of '64, Trustee; Professor James A. Tufts, Class of '74; J. P. Gavit, Lieutenant Edwin L. Parsons, Class of '10, and Corliss Lamont, Class of '20.

It is estimated that 2,000 Exeter men served under the colors in active service. The record of achievements and story of the Exeter men in the war was told by Ensign Hugh Black, Class of '13, and former football star of both Exeter and Yale. Senator James A. Tufts of New Hampshire, who has served Exeter for forty years as Professor of English, spoke on the subject of the Exeter men in the war.

AUTO KILLS MINE EXPERT.

While walking from his home in Scarsdale to the railroad station yesterday J. E. Johnson, Jr., a mining and consulting engineer of 52 William Street, was struck by an automobile and so severely injured that he died later in the hospital of a fractured skull. The chauffeur of the car, William Delano, was arrested and held on a charge of homicide. It was said by the police that E. O. Patz of Scarsdale, owner of the car, was in it at the time of the accident.

Mr. Johnson was a son of Major Joseph E. Johnson, well known in the iron and steel industry. He was 49 years old and had only just returned from China, where he went to investigate mining there.

BLOOMINGDALE FIGHTS SUIT.

Allegations Against Wife Told in Affidavits Opposing Alimony.

Affidavits filed in the Supreme Court yesterday in the separation suit of Mrs. Rosalie Bloomingdale against Irving C. Bloomingdale, in which temporary alimony of $2,000 a month has been awarded to Mrs. Bloomingdale pending trial, show that while she estimated her husband's property at $3,000,000, he swears his entire business interests are worth $1,500,000.

In an affidavit opposing his wife's alimony application, Mr. Bloomingdale accuses her of gross extravagances, and says she compelled him to accede to her demands by exhibitions of temper. He alleges that she said concerning him: "All you have to do is give him hell long enough and you can get anything you want." He also alleges that she used her Tiffany watch as a tee in a game of golf at White Sulphur Springs, Va., and smashed it.

Mr. Bloomingdale accuses his wife of misconduct, but does not ask for a divorce. He mentions Charles Motherill, golf instructor at White Sulphur Springs, in his affidavit, and says his wife spent as high as $38 for telephone calls to Motherill after she returned to New York.

Mrs. Bloomingdale denies every charge of misconduct and says she will get the testimony of twenty persons to prove her innocence of the "scandalous accusations." As to her association with the golf instructor she says she "desired to become proficient in golf" and got as much of his time as she could. She alleges that her husband taught her to smoke cigarettes and that she drinks only for sociability.

Several New Republics Created by War, Making 29 in All.

Correspondence of The Associated Press.

PARIS, March 27.—The world is fast becoming republican. Before the war, monarchies and republics were about equally balanced. Now there are 29 republics as against 21 monarchies, counting Germany, Austria and Russia as one republic each. The number of republics will still be augmented by several new States that are now in course of formation.

The largest republic is China, with 400,000,000 inhabitants; the smallest San Marino, which has only 11,000 citizens.

D. S. C. TO GEN. NICHOLSON.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., April 4.—A telegram was received from Washington today announcing that Brig. Gen. William J. Nicholson, camp commander, has received the Distinguished Service Cross. General Nicholson commanded the 157th Infantry Brigade in France, and led it during the operation which resulted in the capture of Montfaucon.

General Nicholson has been an officer for forty-three years, thirty-seven of which were spent with the 7th Cavalry, Custer's old regiment. He was Colonel for a while. Officers say that his experience dealing directly with enlisted men is probably wider than that of any living officer.

This Stewart Simplicity Saves You $200 to $300

BUT it is not Stewart's only advantage. The saving in cost price is made possible through the elimination of from 600 to 700 parts, most of them from the unsprung portions—the axles, driving gear, etc. Note the illustration.

That means less tire wear, greater gasoline mileage and less wear and need for adjustment, repair or replacements.

Exclusively Stewart

Its value is best seen in the low operating costs and particularly in Stewart's uninterrupted operation.

That in fact is even more important than anything else. Stewart owners place absolute reliance in their trucks. They know they can be depended upon.

That accounts for their use by more than 200 lines of business in 27 different countries.

In Five Years No Stewart Has Worn Out

And the first fifty built are still rendering uninterrupted economical service. Some have fleets of from five to fifty Stewarts.

Stewarts are used in every line of motor truck transportation. In intercity traveling when trains of trucks run on railroad schedule averaging their 15 to 18 miles an hour day and night, Stewarts have proved the constancy of their service.

and you obtain positive, always dependable service.

In city transportation, Stewarts are regarded as first rank trucks. Every need is met with the proper sized Stewart. Bakers, grocers, and others having light weight deliveries to make, use the smaller sized Stewarts. Farmers meet their needs with the Stewart that best suits their requirements.

Suitable bodies are available for every requirement.

Stewarts have these exclusive advantages:

They cost less to buy—Cost less to operate—Cost less to maintain—Require less attention in operation—Have fewer parts to wear out and to be replaced—You save $200 to $300 in the purchase price—And you save in other ways every mile that the Stewart is operated.

Are You Now Getting Truck Efficiency?

If you now operate trucks, check over what their operation is costing you. Perhaps at the saving you make in buying a Stewart, you can better afford to make a change.

Stewarts are best liked by operators who keep closest account on what their trucks are costing and how much service they are giving.

MAURICE CRITICISES PEACE CONFEREES

TELLS SITUATION IN PARIS

He Sees Three Forces There Working Toward the Accomplishment of Good.

Speaking in Carnegie Hall last night in the second lecture he has delivered in America, Major Gen. Frederick B. Maurice, Director of Military Operations on the British General Staff, 1915-1918, declared that in his opinion the only safeguard the world could have from wars lay in the establishment of the League of Nations. He also said that to make the League a factor in world peace the United States would have to join.

"As a soldier who has spent a quarter of his life in the study of the science of arms," he said, "let me tell you I went into the British Army believing that if you want peace you must prepare for war. I believe now that if you prepare thoroughly and efficiently for war, you get war. Since I had to discard my first theory, I sought another solution of the problem of how to avoid war, and I think I have found my solution in the League of Nations."

In the course of his talk, which was well received by an audience numbering perhaps 1,500 persons, General Maurice took occasion to criticise the members of the Peace Conference because, after once presenting the draft of a League of Nations before the Plenary Council and showing that they intended to stand by its provisions, they did not at once proceed to make peace with Germany before discussing the draft of the League's Constitution. He said that in both France and England there was overwhelming sentiment in favor of the establishment of the League.

Forces Working for Good.

"In judging the present crisis which seems to confront the Peace Conference," said General Maurice at the beginning of his lecture, "a study of events which preceded the opening of the conference will perhaps aid us in forming a conclusion as to the real situation.

"You will remember that at that time Clemenceau in a speech hinted that no League of Nations that could be formed would give France the security she demanded from aggression. Great Britain at the same time became mildly excited at the mention of the freedom of the seas. The members of the press had a quarrel as to whether or not they should be excluded from the plenary sessions of the conference. There was the bickering over seating allotments. Our experience with these other crises should therefore make us cautious in making too much out of the present one.

"My own observation tells me that three forces are working in Paris toward an accomplishment of good in the Peace Conference. In the first place there is among the delegates a real and a great determination to get to work. Second, the visit your President made to London, Paris, and Rome aroused great enthusiasm as symbolizing a new era in international relations. This reacted powerfully in Paris. Third, I would say that the common heritage the Americans and English have of the Bible and Shakespeare was cause for harmony. You can't appreciate unless you witness that polyglot assembly sitting at the peace table, the advantage of speaking a common tongue. The delegates of our respective nations have worked in wonderful accord."

Here the speaker took up the organization of the machinery at the conference. He said that the delegates sitting together amid the splendor at Versailles reminded one of a "lot of dingy crows in a gilded cage."

"It is only when you realize that they are the representatives of the people and not of the crowned heads that you appreciate the significance of the gathering," said General Maurice.

He spoke of the three resolutions adopted by the Plenary Council in full session, the first of which established a League of Nations as essential to the treaty; the second stated the objects of the League, to promote international co-operation, to limit armaments, and to prevent war; the third dealt with the League's constitution. General Maurice declared that what he saw as the main good in the League was the bringing about of international co-operation, for when nations came more directly into contact with each other, recognizing each other's ideals and ambitions, there would be more general happiness and less danger of war.

At this point he said he believed the Conference had made a mistake.

"Having established the principles of a League of Nations," said General Maurice, "and showed it intended to abide by them, the Conference should have proceeded at once to the task of making terms with Germany. The effect in France by the delay was bad. The armistice had to be extended, causing an atmosphere inimical to the discussion of peace.

"Also the effect on Germany was extremely bad. She is like a condemned criminal awaiting sentence, and until that sentence is imposed she cannot progress in any direction. If we are not careful, there will be a revolution in Germany, and once the settled Government is overthrown it will be difficult to make terms."

He said he had no fear as to Germany's being able to create any more trouble in a military way. He then took up the demand for a League in France and England.

France and Britain for It.

"France is honestly desirous of a League of Nations," he said. "But the United States must be a signatory power or else France will not feel she is entirely secured by the establishment of the League. In Great Britain likewise there is an overwhelming majority in favor of the League, although the voice of what I consider a small minority has been raised against the idea.

"Those in Great Britain against the League insist that it is a Machiavellian plot of President Wilson's to protect Germany. You over here can probably get a proper value on that theory by comparing it with what I have heard said in this country—that the League plan is a plot on the part of England to drag the United States into the British Empire.

"I do not believe it possible to abolish war by the League of Nations, as many do. I believe, though, if we take international co-operation as a basis for the League we can eventually work by experience toward the abolition of war. The League, as I see it, will accomplish three things. First, it will remove quarrels between men by making intercourse between nations more simple. Second, it will make wars more difficult and it will show that wars don't pay. Third, when trouble does arise, it will make it easier to smooth things over or will limit the conflagration by having a machinery already in operation to deal with the situation."

WANT CHARGES DISMISSED.

Counsel Assail Indictments Found in Moving Picture Case.

Judge Rosalsky, in General Sessions yesterday, reserved decision on a motion to dismiss the indictment against Dr. William F. Doyle, chief of the Bureau of Fire Prevention of the Fire Department, who was indicted with three others on charges of conspiracy and acceptance of unlawful fees from managers of moving picture theatres.

The Grand Jury minutes, which Mr. Levy and the defendants were permitted to examine by court order, were made public for the first time yesterday. They disclosed that Mrs. Leon Wallace, wife of one of the defendants, had been a witness and had testified that Frank McGoey, a defendant, had told her husband that the money was to be divided in six parts. When Mrs. Wallace was asked who had been mentioned as sharing in this money she is quoted as replying:

"The Fire Commissioner, Mr. Drennan; Mr. Doyle, Mr. Kenlon, the Fire Chief, and the other three—Mr. McGinnis, Mr. McGoey, and Mr. Wallace."

Chief Assistant District Attorney Talley said that there was no ground whatever for McGoey to mention the names of Chief John Kenlon and Fire Commissioner Drennan, who, as a matter of fact, had started the investigation of the alleged graft and had sent the evidence to the District Attorney's office.

"The names of the Commissioner and the Chief were mentioned, evidently, to make Wallace believe that the money had to be divided in that way and thus McGoey would get a larger share in the distribution," asserted Mr. Talley. Mr. Levy contended that Mrs. Wallace was an accomplice because of her hearing this statement made to her husband. Wallace is assisting the prosecution. Moses H. Grossman and Terence McManus argued for dismissal of the indictments against McGoey and McGinnis.

WILL RETAIN OFFICERS OF TEMPORARY NAVY

They Will Take Place of Reserve Officers, Who Must Be Discharged When Peace Comes.

WASHINTON, April 4.—Because of the failure of Congress to enact the Naval Appropriation bill with its provision for an increased naval personnel, practically all members of the Naval Reserve Force on active duty must be released immediately upon the declaration of peace. In making this announcement today, the Navy Department said that because of this fact and of the great need of officers it would be inadvisable generally to accept the resignation of officers of the temporary navy.

"Our troops abroad must be brought home," said the department's announcement, "and they must be fed and provided for 'over there' before they come home. Our associates in the war still require food and provisions. To do this work, the navy today is operating 110 troop transports and 220 cargo carriers. The temporary officers of the navy are making this work possible because the department can count upon holding them for six months after peace is signed.

"The regular navy is busy keeping the fighting forces on edge, the reservists are going out fast and will be obliged to go as soon as peace is signed, which will leave the bulk of the temporary officers available and necessary to transport and provision our troops 'over there.' Adjustments in personnel are quickly being made with this end in view."

Through the failure of the navy bill with its authorization for retention of 10 per cent. of the reserve force until Jan. 1, 1920, and 5 per cent. until July 1, 1920, there is no authority under existing law for the retention of members of the Naval Reserve Force, even with their consent, on active duty after the national emergency is declared to be at an end.

American Operas Sung Again.

This season's American operas, Breil's "Legend" and Hugo's "Temple Dancer," with Cadman's "Shanewis" for good musical measure, were repeated at the Metropolitan last evening before the usual large subscription house and some less frequent opera-goers, won by an enterprise of native art. The original casts were engaged, headed by the Misses Ponselle, Easton, and Braslau, and the novel scenes were received with interest and applause. A fourth performance is probable in the season's closing week, a fortnight from now, and there are many requests that it shall be the final Saturday night, when the general public might have opportunity to see these home products, not at opera subscription rates, but at popular prices.

Singer and Sonata Pair Heard.

Rachel Morton Harris, a soprano, whose vivacious mood was as if emblazoned on banners in the lively blue angel-sleeves of a mystic Melisande gown, interested a large audience at her début song recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon. She sang, with a voice somewhat veiled at times, an artistic program of unusual airs, including among later songs "In Summer Fields," by Jaffrey Harris, and for final encore the American negro spiritual, "Just Like John." Last evening in the same hall, Augusta Tollefsen and Michel Penha gave rare chamber music for piano and 'cello by Beethoven and Brahms, ending with the interesting sonata, op. 52, by Leo Ornstein.

WOMEN OPPOSE WAGE BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—A minimum wage for women bill similar to the Massachusetts minimum wage law was introduced today in the Legislature by Senator John Knight of Wyoming following a conference between Majority Leader J. Henry Walters of the Senate and Speaker Sweet of the Assembly. The measure is offered as a substitute for the Foley-Bewley bill, which was indorsed by the women's organizations comprising the women's joint legislative conference. The conference is opposed to the substitute bill.

"The Massachusetts minimum wage law is a farce," declared Miss Grace Phelps, legislative representative of the conference, today. "The Massachusetts law gives its Minimum Wage Commission authority to determine what its minimum wage shall be, but no power to force the employer to adopt the wage.

"The Foley-Bewley bill is a bipartisan bill, and the Republicans in the Legislature can support it with the happy feeling that when passed they will share the credit with the Democrats. But if they put over this fake substitute the women will not be slow in exposing their attempt to get credit for a bill which will not work. If the Republican Party is really in earnest about having a minimum wage for the women workers of this State it will see that the Bewley bill is reported intact out of the Rules Committee in the Assembly and passed."

SHIPPING BOARD BUYS OIL.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Contracts for 7,500,000 barrels of fuel oil for delivery at Atlantic and Gulf ports during the next twelve months were awarded today by the Shipping Board. All bids for Pacific Coast delivery were rejected as unsatisfactory.

Contracts were entered into with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey for 3,500,000 barrels delivered at New York, 1,500,000 barrels at Norfolk, and 500,000 barrels at Baltimore, and with the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana for 2,000,000 barrels delivered at New Orleans.

The price at all three Atlantic ports for "B" grade, wharf or tank delivery, was $1.10 a barrel, and for delivery by barge within harbor limits, $1.22; for "C" grade, wharf or tank delivery, 98 cents, and for delivery by barge, $1.05. The New Orleans price for "B" grade, barge delivery, was 97 cents, and "C" grade, barge delivery, 80 cents, no prices being named for wharf or tank delivery. All prices become effective tomorrow.

Additional contracts are to be let for Atlantic and Gulf Coast delivery, as well as large contracts for delivery on the Pacific Coast, Panama, and Honolulu.

Edwards Host for "Cappy Ricks."

A special performance of "Cappy Ricks" will take place at the Morosco Theatre tomorrow night before an audience selected by William H. Edwards, Internal Revenue Collector. Workers in the First, Second, Third and Fourteenth New York, and Fifth New Jersey Districts will be present, and invitations have also been sent to Secretary Glass, Mayor Hylan, Governor Smith, Commissioner Daniel C. Roper and others.

THE SEVENTY-SEVENTH'S PARADE.

There will be widespread and deep regret in New York if the 77th Division, made up of men from this city and the districts near it, is not allowed to parade here before disbanding. Secretary Baker says it will be allowed to parade "if humanly possible," but that it may not accord with the demobilization plans of General March.

Surely it should be "humanly possible" to alter these plans in so far as might have to be done to enable the people of New York to hail, as they would like to do, their own men, their comrades, the soldiers whom they would best like to review and salute.

Not for the first time the War Department seems slow to respond to a strong and genuine and admirable local feeling. New York showed in the case of the 27th its pride and its joy in its citizens who fought for it and for free democracy everywhere. Our 27th was made up of the National Guard. Our 77th, trained at Camp Upton, is naturally and indivisibly an army of New York. It consists entirely of men drafted from New York and adjoining regions.

If, with unexampled enthusiasm, New York welcomed back the 27th, a part of its own patriotic gift, a specimen of its own patriotic desire, why should the 77th, equal in its service, equal in the hearts of its friends and of the city, be unable to take part in a parade equally evocative in every American heart of the spirit in which all divisions, all Americans, have fought in the war?

Conditions of the camp and port should not be allowed to weigh against the universal feeling of the community. It is not for the people of New York to set themselves against a necessary, pondered policy of the War Department; but it would be unfortunate if formalities or questions of expense should be permitted to frustrate the strong, deliberate, and almost passionate wish of the people of New York to see their own men, their own soldiers and friends, marching along the avenue of honor. The 77th is entitled to the hospitality and the welcome which millions were so glad to give to the 27th.

MUDDLING A SUBWAY QUESTION.

The Legislature is considering the appointment of a committee to investigate the Forty-second Street shuttle question. The Legislature would better leave that question where it belongs, and where the Legislature put it, in the care of the Public Service Commission. It knows more than the Legislature can learn, and soon the shuttle inconvenience will be lessened and may be ended. Within a few days the west side subways will run to Brooklyn, and the shuttle changes will then be made there rather than at Forty-second Street. In Brooklyn the east and west side subways run past the same platforms, and the changes can be made in the manner familiar to those who change from local to express trains. Apparently this will be the privilege of those riding in either direction, and it will make no difference to Brooklyn riders wishing to change from east to west side trains whether they are going or coming to or from Times Square. Still further betterment will come when the Steinway tunnel is extended to Times Square. The best thing the Legislature can do with the subway question is to let it alone, and receive thanks.

A similar service will be gratefully received from those who are proposing to substitute fares according to length of ride for the customary nickel ride. Foreign practice is sometimes mentioned in support of this proposal, which looks fair on the surface. One trouble with it is that it does not meet the conditions created by the war. The Glasgow Herald has announced within a week or two that "fares on the subway are to be "doubled to meet increased expendi-"ture." Glasgow is probably the best example of zone fares, which have produced there conditions of congestion at the centre and prostration of the outer regions, which New York is spending some three hundred millions to prevent. The introduction of zone fares here would be a real estate calamity. Mount Vernon has just resolved to try it, and is welcome to the fruits of the experience. Its success would prove nothing to New York, but its failure would be convincing. It will be necessary to wait a year or two for the Mount Vernon demonstration, but Glasgow's should be sufficient, and it is ready at hand. Neither in peace nor in war does New York want zone fares.

THE WELL-ADVERTISED REVOLUTION.

Whatever may be the success of General Aurelio Blanquet's attempt to overthrow the Carranza Government in Mexico, admiration cannot be withheld from the General's publicity manager. No enterprise aiming at the overthrow of a Government ever had more favorable and widespread advertising. Felix Diaz, whom Blanquet is going to reinforce, supersede, or overthrow, as the case may be—Mexican precedent in these matters offers opportunity for considerable speculation—has been conducting his revolution at the old stand for some time, but without much success. But, says General Blanquet's representative, "the landing of Blanquet will send "a thrill to the heart of every true "republican." Meanwhile a biographical booklet is published, adorned with photographs illustrating the General's record, including such varied matters as the General in favor, receiving a decoration from Victoriano Huerta, and the General in exile, feeding the birds in Central Park.

The Blanquet program is an excellent one, and is inspired largely by the conviction that good relations between Mexico and the United States are to the ultimate benefit of both countries. That principle has not been much honored in Mexico in recent years. Both intention and performance have to be taken into account, and Mexican relations with any and all foreign Powers cannot prosper very much until order is restored in that unfortunate country. President Carranza has had some success in this matter, but the persistence of the various revolutionary enterprises, one of which has now expanded so notably, is proof that he has not succeeded completely. It must be the wish of all Americans to see Mexico united under some stable Government which shall be satisfactory to the Mexican people, and at the same time shall realize that foreigners have on the whole done more good than harm to Mexico, and that to have one's residence north of the Rio Grande is not complete proof of moral turpitude.

PAY FOR GERMANY'S COTTON.

If a million bales of American cotton are bought for Germany, it cannot reasonably be expected that payment will be made out of the German funds and property seized here by the Alien Property Custodian. The price of cotton has been rising, partly on account of reports about plans for the purchase of 1,000,000 bales, or even 2,000,000, to be used by manufacturers in Germany. After an interview with the Custodian, Representative Heflin of Alabama, who is interested in these plans, referred to the value of property seized here and said that provision for financing the purchase of 2,000,000 bales could easily be made. But he did not assert that the Custodian would approve such use of the funds in his possession.

In his recent annual report former Custodian A. Mitchell Palmer, now Attorney General, emphatically urged that the Government should retain the seized property, as it was about sufficient to satisfy the claims of Americans against Germany. Its value is a little more than $700,000,000, but the greater part of it, represented in corporations, is being administered as a trust, and there is not much in available cash. The State Department says that the claims of American citizens and companies against Germany amount to $750,000,000. There is not more than enough in the seized property to satisfy them. The Allies have been informed that we shall ask no indemnity in addition to this property. At present prices $280,000,000 must be paid for 2,000,000 bales of cotton. Those who are interested in the movement for supplying German mills with this raw material must not count upon drawing $280,000,000, or $140,000,000, or any other sum from the Custodian's holdings. Final disposition of these is to be determined by Congress, which probably will decide that the entire proceeds shall be used for the payment of claims.

SAVERS OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Divers Senators opposed to the League of Nations are, or, until they listened to counsels of prudence, were, pathetically invoking the Constitution. It is an old habit of statesmen opposed to a policy, however necessary or inevitable, frantically to clamor that the necessary and inevitable thing cannot be done without violation of the Constitution. In the earlier days of the Government doubts about its powers as yet unexercised under the Constitution were natural. Mr. Jefferson himself was more than doubtful of the constitutional authority for his greatest achievement, the Louisiana Purchase. In 1802 he thought that after the treaty for the purchase of Louisiana had been ratified, Congress "must "then appeal to the nation for an "additional article in the Constitution, "approving and confirming an act "which the nation had not previously "authorized. The Constitution has "made no provision for our holding "foreign territory, still less for in-"corporating foreign nations into our "Union."

Josiah Quincy, leader of the Federalist Party in the House, said that "the clause in the Constitution giving "the power to Congress to admit into "the Union other States had unques-"tionably sole reference to the ad-"mission of States within the limits "of the original territory of the "United States. No original docu-"ment, argument, or treaties, at the "time of the formation of the Con-"stitution, can be adduced to give "color to the opinion that it was in-"tended to extend to territories then "belonging to foreign Powers, beyond "the limits of the original thirteen "States." This honest and highly able man is, perhaps, best remembered for his famous declaration in the Eleventh Congress on the bill for the admission of Louisiana as a State, "that, if this bill passes, the bonds "of this Union are virtually dissolved; "that the States which compose it are "free from their moral obligations, "and that, as it will be the right of "all, so it will be the duty of some, "to prepare definitely for a separa-"tion; amicably if they can, violently "if they must."

Under the Constitution, to the minds of Mr. Quincy and thirty-five other members of that House, the United States could not grow. It has grown enormously. It has made other accessions of territory. It has found, and will continue to find, in the Constitution all the powers necessary to a growing and living nation. A hundred years hence the concern of the Senators now so busy to find the adherence of the United States to the League of Nations abhorrent to the Constitution may look as fantastic to us as Mr. Quincy's theory about the constitutional limitation on the admission of States looks to us now.

WAR WEARINESS.

A British correspondent lately wrote from Paris that it is felt that the treaty must be "something acceptable and desirable"—to Germany. We know what that means. A treaty acceptable and desirable to Germany will be neither acceptable nor desirable to the peoples who spent their blood and money to defeat Germany. Statesmen who are worried about the consequences of leaving Germany dissatisfied might speculate on the consequences of leaving their own peoples dissatisfied after terrible sacrifices and what seemed to be a triumphant conclusion of the war.

Whatever may be our attitude toward Bolshevism in Russia, Bolshevism has been used by Hungary and may be used by Germany purely as a political weapon to scare us into giving up the safeguards of peace and security which we won on the battlefield. Dispatches say that some persons at the Peace Conference do not want to fight this new enemy because "it would be too much like starting a "new war when the world is clamor-"ing for peace." The new war has been started, and started as was the old war, by our enemies. In 1915 and 1916 many people assured us that the American people would never make war on Germany, despite the fact that Germany was making war on us. But the time came when the American people lost their taste for a one-sided war, for suffering injury without attempt at self-defense; and nobody will deny that they fought hard enough when they once started.

We fought the war for certain things which are fairly well known to every one—they may be summed up as security from a Power which threatened every free people in the world. We are now threatened again by that same Power; using a new weapon, borrowed from Russia, but seeking the same end by a somewhat different means. Is there any reason to suppose that our people are too apathetic to finish the work? Is there any reason to suppose that we did not really mean it, that we will stop short of victory? When our people look facts in the face defeatism is not likely to be any more popular now than it was two years ago. After spending five million lives in defense of their liberties, the peoples of the allied countries are naturally war weary; but they would become still more weary of Governments whose hesitation or timorousness or lack of faith might lead them to surrender what our armies have won.

WHAT WE OWE THE CZECHS.

A correspondent of The Evening Post reports that people are—or were not very long ago—actually starving to death in Prague. The Czechoslovak revolution at the end of October—the fruit of years of preparation—was the biggest single factor in the sudden collapse of Austria-Hungary. When the Czechoslovak people formally proclaimed the freedom for which hundreds of thousands of its sons had been fighting in the allied armies the nation was in serious economic straits because of Austrian and Magyar oppression; but the leaders told them that the Allies, to whom they had been so faithful, to whom they had rendered such great services, to whom they had looked for more than verbal recognition of their accomplishments, would surely send them food by the New Year. The New Year passed and there was little food; the leaders still promise it, but people are still starving.

To some extent the food shortage is due to the German Austrians, who take the coal that the Czechs furnish them at the request of the Peace Conference, but interpose all sorts of delays when it comes to sending the cars back filled with foodstuffs. To some extent the blame lies with the Italians and Jugoslavs, who have allowed their own quarrel to hinder the provisioning of a people which has been a good friend to both. But the chief responsibility falls on the Conference itself, which seems willing to permit the infliction of further humiliations and privations on our friends, but cannot bring itself to coerce our enemies.

We know that to the Czechoslovak armies in Russia is due the fact that German influence last year did not spread over all Siberia to the shores of the Pacific. We know that many thousands of Czechoslovaks fought in the armies of America and France and Italy. Not so many people know how much the Czechoslovak revolution contributed to the downfall of Austria-Hungary, and how deeply the British and American Secret Services were indebted to the Czechoslovak information system for knowledge of the activities of the common enemy. Yet we are letting the Czechs go unfed while we send food to Germany and Austria. The Hungarians, also short of food and till lately our open enemies, turn against us once again and we talk about compromising with them and giving them economic relief. The Czechs, always our friends, are as short of food as the Magyars; they do not threaten to go over to the enemy, so we let them starve.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Commendable If Sure to be Effectual.

So many have been the robberies, recently, in this city and vicinity, and so often have these crimes been accompanied by brutal assaults and even murder, that the need of more effective action, preventive, deterrent, and punitive, is obvious. It is well, therefore, that the matter has been receiving the careful consideration of the regular and the additional Grand Juries.

Both bodies have reached the conclusion that the first step to take is to lengthen the terms of imprisonment imposed after convictions for either first or second degree robbery and the establishment of a minimum sentence of at least ten years. If it were certain or even highly probable that this would be effective, these suggestions would have general and enthusiastic approval. On that question, however, there is room for some doubt, as it has not been the lesson of experience that crimes are inversely proportioned in numbers to the severity of the statutory penalties provided and imposed. On the contrary, there has been for many years a tendency, which the results have vindicated, toward decreasing the rigors of the law and toward giving Judges, as to the length of sentences, a discretionary power which is lost or lessened when minimum and maximum terms are fixed for crimes definitely defined.

It is no longer the accepted belief that the ends of justice are best served by imposing the same punishment on all who commit the same statutory offense. Discrimination between first and second offenders has become a regular rule of criminal procedure, and for the same crime one man is sent to prison for life and another is set free after brief incarceration. The new penology, so called, has little use for either minimum or maximum sentences.

Punishment Should Be Certain.

As an alternative to increasing the severity of the laws against robbery or other crimes, enlightened preference, nowadays, is for more effective police work in the apprehension of criminals, for shortening the delay before trial, and for making punishment certain rather than prolonged. It is not at all probable that the man who was not kept honest by the prospect of serving twenty years in prison would have refrained because the term had been lengthened by five years, while it is highly probable that he would have resisted temptation if he had learned that theft was practically sure to be followed, and promptly, by an imprisonment long or short according to the amount of assurance he could give of determination to sin no more.

To the old ideas of preventive, deterrent, and punitive has been added that of reformative, but with it has come appreciation of the fact that in some cases reform is impossible and that in those cases permanent sequestration of the criminal is necessary, not as a punishment, but to safeguard society.

Discrimination That's Not a Grievance.

Senator Phelan's discussion of "discrimination," as it arises in the case of the Japanese, would have been a little more effective had he refrained from expressing regret that Commodore Perry opened "a Pandora's box of international trouble" when he forced Japan to cease being a hermit nation. Advantages as well as troubles followed the Commodore's famous achievement, and it put an end to evils already serious and threatening soon to become intolerable.

With most of what the Senator said, as well as with the remarks of Senator Hitchcock on the same subject, there will be general agreement in this country. Neither of them, moreover, said anything that need be taken amiss by the Japanese, especially as the Japanese are themselves discriminators between races in much the same way and to much the same extent as are the Americans, the Australians, and others who are determined to protect their own labor from direct Japanese competition.

To Japanese, as Japanese, there is no antagonism anywhere of an offensive kind. Everywhere their abilities and their virtues are recognized, and the objection made to them as immigrant laborers is not based on the claim that they are inferior, but on their irremediable difference from their white neighbors.

They are, in short, unassimilable, and hence there must be refused to them the privileges that go with assimilability. But the Japanese merchants, students, and diplomats who come among us encounter no trace of racial prejudice, and they all get the treatment their excellent behavior earns.

"Economy" May Be Expensive.

Supt. Ettinger says that there is something of exaggeration in the description of conditions in Public School 70, just made public by the Education Association of this city. Even if the exaggeration were considerable, however, the truth would be sufficiently horrifying, and even half that has been told in the association's report is enough to convict both the city and its educational authorities of unpardonable negligence in allowing such maltreatment of 2,000 children to go on for a single day.

It was in the power of the Board of Education to close the school entirely, for in such a building the time of the pupils and teachers is much worse than wasted. The few things that can be learned or taught in bad air, bad light, and abominably crowded rooms do not begin to counterbalance the permanent injury to health suffered in such an environment.

All that can be wrong with a school building seems to be wrong with this one, and its use is not excused, and is but poorly explained, by the refusal or failure of the Board of Estimate to make the appropriations for which the Board of Education has so often pleaded. New York's taxpayers, heavily burdened as they are, do not begrudge necessary expenditures on their public schools, and they will see to it that such expenditures are made if the facts are brought to their attention, plainly and emphatically.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A short time ago I had the pleasure of attending a meeting at which poultry experts discussed various aspects of their business, and gave some startling figures to show what it means to the country.

One speaker told how a boy had made a financial success with poultry, while others around him had been unable to make things come out square. An inquirer learned that when he started in his parents built a henhouse for him, and then feeling that so worthy an enterprise should have further parental support, they furnished the grain to feed his chickens. This boy was making a success with poultry.

The thing that appealed to me strangely was that the audience looked on this story as a joke. Who is the great parent to whom every one is looking for the unearned dollar?

We are nothing if we are not in fashion. I recommend that all poultrymen "organize" and present their "demands":

"Whereas, It has been determined that a 'living wage' is not less than $6 a day, and that no person should work more than eight hours daily; and,

"Whereas, The Government by bonds or otherwise is paying to railroad, telegraph, and other employes such sums as when added to their earnings will make their receipts from $6 to $10 a day, we demand:

"1. That the Government of the United States furnish grain needed by poultrymen to such an amount that their receipts shall be not less than $6 daily on week days and double pay on Sundays.

"2. That beginning May 1, 1919, the price of eggs and all poultry products be increased and maintained for the next twelve months at a uniform advance of 40 per cent. over the prices of the last twelve months.

"3 That eight hours shall constitute a day in all departments of the poultry business, and that hens shall be required under penalty to complete their day's work in that time."

Tobacco and the Churches.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For years certain religious denominations have been complaining that men would not go to church, and have assiduously sought to remedy this state of affairs. Now we read that the Presbyterians and the Methodists are planning a nation-wide campaign to do away entirely with tobacco. This will certainly accomplish the purpose. Millions of smokers, deprived of the solace of tobacco, will rush to join the churches which are responsible for the abolition of the sinful weed.

The truly awful effect of cigarettes upon our soldiers overseas is already a matter of history—how their health has been ruined, their morale impaired, and how, in consequence, they were hopelessly beaten by the Germans in every battle. The memorable parade of the 27th Division—practically all smokers—proved what feeble wrecks of once vigorous manhood they had become.

Let us hope the righteous work will go on until we return to the good old times when men were arrested for kissing their wives on Sunday and all personal liberty is done away with. Whatever the majority of the people enjoy doing is undoubtedly harmful and wicked, and must be stopped. Therefore let our church-going friends sound the tocsin and go forth to glorious victory, knowing that all the hundred million citizens of the United States—except a mere handful of ninety-nine millions and a half—are with them, heart and soul.

HERBERT HALL WINSLOW.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with interest the article in yesterday's Times regarding conditions at the Brest Camp. I was at the camp from Feb. 2 to Feb. 15, and I can state from personal experience that, with two or three minor exceptions, the article correctly depicts conditions and organization. Although it is but a few months old, the camp is far superior to the camps of other armies, which have been established for several years.

Of course, it is not a paradise, the weather conditions and the necessarily temporary nature of everything done makes that impossible, but the mud-slinging criticisms of Brest are, in so far as they contain any truth, based solely upon conditions in the first few weeks of the camp's existence, conditions which in a new camp are almost inevitable, and have filled me, and I believe the majority of the men returning from France, with nothing but disgust.

To the men who have been members of the American Expeditionary Forces, and who have been able to see the wonderful achievements of our War Department in France, the political howlings of the would-be detractors of that work seem as foolish as they are contemptible. As the men return from abroad, the truth of all these matters will be known, and the libels uttered against the War Department will react solely upon their publishers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The German psychology is depicted very truly in your editorial, "The Innocents." During the war, while Germany was slaying innocent children by her Zeppelins in France and England, by her submarines on the seas, and by her Turks in Armenia, she always whined that on account of the barbarous blockade of the Allies German babies were dying of milk famine.

"At the siege of a certain city, called Bamiyan," writes Jacob Abbott in his history of Genghis Khan, "a young grandson of Genghis Khan, wishing to please his grandfather by his daring, approached so near the wall that he was reached by an arrow shot by one of the archers and killed. Genghis Khan was deeply affected by this event, and he showed by the bitterness of his grief that, though he was so utterly heartless and cruel in inflicting these woes on others, he could feel for himself very acutely when it came to his turn to suffer."

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Going to Montreal and Ottawa for the first time, I was lucky—though Canadians did not seem to think so—in seeing those cities and the surrounding country under a white mantle of snow. In old books of history and romance I had read of Montreal with snow banked high in its streets and with a white vista stretching away to the Laurentian Hills and the Adirondacks, beyond the frozen waters of the St. Lawrence; so now I was glad to see those dream-pictures of mine fulfilled by this reality. Montreal is still a romantic city and I was enchanted by the look and music of the sleighs driven through its streets by figures muffled up in furs and buffalo rugs.

In the clear cold air the music of the sleigh-bells jangled with a sweet tintinnabulation, full of curious Old World harmonies which brought back to my spirit vague remembrances of far-off days when there was a French court life round that hill of Mount Royal and when gentlemen of France, with coats of flowered silk under their furs and with ladies in high wigs as white as the snow in the streets, drove in their sleighs, with those little bells ringing ahead of them, to a reception by M. le Marquis de Tracy, who had come with the latest news from the Court of Louis XIV. Down in the valley the Hurons were at war, as always, with the Iroquois, and dainty little women in pompadour gowns and high-heeled shoes dreamed o' nights, when the wind howled, that the redskins were smashing through the stockades and had come in for scalps. . . .

I saw no red Indian in Montreal, but here in the shops and the streets, as also at Ottawa, I heard French spoken, with a touch, as it seemed to me, of antique accent, and one boy from whom I asked the way could speak no English at all. In a big store in Ottawa the young men and women behind the counters were all chattering together in French, and coming from France through the years of war it seemed to me a queer thing to hear that speech again thousands of miles away, out here in Canada, in a British city. It came to me as a surprise, though I had known it would be so, as we all know things vaguely, without realizing them closely. Through the windows of the train, driving hour after hour through the great Dominion, I stared out across the snow fields of Canada, white again at the end of Winter with the voice of Spring already calling. Icicles ten feet long hung from the sloping roofs of wooden barns dotted about this big white loneliness. Solitary farmsteads stood with snowdrifts banked against their walls far from any other sign of human habitation.

Through plantations of bare trees the sun glinted upon the snow-powdered undergrowth, and its light was broken up into the primary colors of the prism. All across the snow fields stretching interminably away, or reaching out to the far horizon of the hills there were delicate, shining colors which gave a mystical beauty to the white expanse, and then gradually, as dusk came, the colors faded, and the whiteness of the world was absolute and perfect. Then the crescent moon rose, and the rays glinted like silver arrows upon frozen rivers and falls, and I saw the unearthly glory of a Canadian night in the bush of the snows. I should like to have gone walking there, hour after hour, in that silence and that whiteness. . . . But the colored waiter in the train laid the table for dinner, and I had to make a choice between lamb chops and scrambled eggs, with a sudden fall from romance to prosaic comfort.

In the train were numbers of Canadian soldiers just back from France and Flanders, going home to some of those lonely farmsteads I saw, by way of the cities in which they like to linger, too long, I am told. I seemed to know their faces. I am sure I met that boy with a ruddy apple face who wore his cap like Ol' Bill in a careless shapeless way. I am sure I met him a thousand times on the roads through the old Ypres salient, and afterward from Cambrai to Mons. He sat in the corner of the smoking carriage, with a fixed smile at the corners of his mouth, and a queer thoughtful look in his eyes, as though trying to reconcile that life of war with this other life to which his mind was groping back. There was a merry Canadian private, talkative, excited, full of comic oratory, with funny stories streaked by the irony of frightful remembrances. He had been a sniper, lying in wait for Germans to show their heads, plugging their brains as he lay behind a sandbag shelter. Now he was going to get back into business life again—if he could find a job. He was not sure of finding a job and wondered how long his dollars would last out.

There were many more like that, he said—thousands of them at a loose end after having thrown up everything to get into "the show." It would take some time to settle down. Some of them would never settle down. They had been unsettled for life, by being so close to death. There was an aunt of his who wrote her mind to him. "You should see my aunt!" he remarked to his company in the smoking carriage. "She's a regular aunt! She's a wonder, is my aunt!" The company in the smoking carriage became interested in the aunt of Private Maloney, stayed out of their sleeping bunks to get a glimpse of her at a wayside station at midnight, and woke up Private Maloney when at last he had fallen asleep, so that he should not miss her. She was a dear, white-haired old lady, who boarded the train, and laughed with a little moisture in her eyes at the sight of that tall soldier, who took her in his arms and kissed her, and said "Hulloh, aunt!" and became shy and silent and embarrassed, because he had forgotten how to talk to aunts during those years when he was lying in wait for the glimpse of a German's head. . . .

I saw other greetings in Ottawa, where a band accompanied them with music. There was a scurry and scamper as the train came in and groups of Canadian soldiers were surrounded by small crowds, calling their names, clutching their arms, trying to kiss them over barricades of packs and steel hats. Two girls gave a wild squeal and rushed down the platform at a lonely figure with his steel hat at his back, as he used to go up the Arras-Cambrai road. "Hello," he said, with a queer grin. That is what most of them say. It is a word that covers many memories which will never be put into speech, things that can never be told to women, things that are best forgotten.

I have been in Canada only a few days. That is not long enough (though I met many people between the smoking carriage with Private Maloney and the Governor General's house in Ottawa) to get more than a superficial knowledge of Canadian problems and Canadian psychology. But I had many interesting conversations with important people and people of no importance whatever, who are the most important of all, and from what I heard and saw I was able to get some glimpse at least of the present spirit of Canada. It is not altogether a happy spirit, I find. Although the fighting and the sacrifice are ended, the Canadian people are not basking in a sense of joy and contentment. Here, as in other countries, war has left a heritage of economic perplexities, difficult problems, and passionate controversy. In a hundred small things as well as in many big things it has produced grievances and sadnesses which affect the spirit and temper of the people. In all sorts of ways it has upset the old structure of Canadian social life, as, for instance, the homecoming of large numbers of Canadian soldiers with English wives. Fifty per cent. of them, I am told on good authority, are coming back with English girls as their mates—and that is hard on Canadian girls who have been waiting for the men to come back, and who in the cities are five and six to one of the male population. I wonder how it is going to work out. The English girls are a little chilled by their first glimpses of Canada on a cold dockside. They are frightened at the thought of the loneliness away out there over the snow fields. . . .

But there are bigger problems than that, greater causes for distress in the heart of the Dominion. It is not going to be easy in a little while to absorb the homecoming soldiers into civil and industrial life. Many of them after the desert and discipline of the battlefields are loath to leave the cities with their light and luxury. They demand bigger wages for labor than in the old days. They have a sense of injustice because the sacrifice they made is not paid back by big, immediate reward. It makes some of them a little sullen with fate, though they cannot explain their own feelings except by a curse or two. It is the scar of war in their hearts, still unhealed. For the first time criticism is beginning to make itself heard against the conduct of the war, as far as Canadian troops were concerned, and against high military authorities. There is a group of critics led by a strong, stern man who is sharpening a very large tomahawk and preparing to go out for scalps with a most pessimistic spirit of vengeance. The idea is growing in Canada that Canadian troops were sacrificed too ruthlessly in the last phases of the war, and that among other episodes the capture of Mons before the armistice was an unnecessary waste of life. This point of view is already looming up in the Dominion Parliament and the Dominion press, and will cause a political storm when the leader of the critics forces the issue, as he intends to do.

Small causes of irritation are working among Canadian officers and men, and one of them, quite inflaming in its effect out here, is an order issued by the British Governor of Cologne making that city out of bounds to the Canadian troops in the Army of Occupation. All these things are unfortunate, and due in my opinion to a misunderstanding of the true facts. I find Canada split up into political, religious, and racial groups, so that a stranger, addressing audiences, like I have had to do, drops unconsciously a number of heavy bricks, which fall with a dull sickening thud, as he knows by their echoes in the silence. The French Canadians, maintaining their old speech and traditions and faith, as they have every right to do, did not take kindly to conscription and aroused racial differences in Canada which have not yet been healed, though I think the heat of passion has died down. The Irish question is acute and Irish Catholics are at loggerheads with Ulster Irish, reproducing in a minor way the situation in Ireland herself. The demand of the Irish people for autonomy, which in some form or other is impossible of denial if we wish for American friendship, does not meet with any approval among the majority of English speaking Canadians. Catholics and Protestants, whether Irish, French, or English speaking Canadians, belong to separate castes not only in the political but in the social world of Canada. So it is all very difficult.

Yet the spirit of Canada as a people rises above those controversies and rivalries by pride in achievement, and has, I think, taken a higher place in the world's esteem. The toughness, the tenacity, the patient courage, and the heroism of Canadian troops has won the deep admiration of the Americans, who recognize that those people across their border went very quickly and in large numbers to the help of Mother England, and fought gallantly through many dreadful battles on the way to victory. Among the first who went over 62 per cent. were English born and returned to England in her time of need without any question or any delay—at once, with the offer of their souls and bodies for service, and after them there was a steady stream from Canada, including many fine, brave men from French Canada. Men deserted to go from the Northwest Mounted Police, taking off their scarlet tunics—I saw their uniforms in Ottawa—in exchange for khaki, and now on their homecoming are giving themselves up again with a grin, and a word or two of "Well, I guess we're under arrest. What about it?"

Canada has forged links between herself and England which should be stronger than those which bound us before the war, because of common sacrifice. There is only one pity as far as England is concerned, and that is that because of local patriotism the Canadian people are apt to forget the wonderful achievements of the English troops themselves, the glory of poor old Tommy Atkins, who because he was in greater numbers—forming 68 per cent. of the British Army from first to last—made the greater sacrifice, and through all this war fought with a courage beyond all words of praise, not getting nearly so much publicity as Colonial troops, and not claiming honor for himself, but doing a grim job, silently and without a touch of swank. England is grateful to Canada for her brave service and it will be sad if Canada does not let love stay in her heart for England and for those boys of England who fought as their comrades. The press of Canada does not say much of English deeds, and ignores too much the victories won by English troops, but that is due to the pride of the Dominion in her own sons, and will, I think, give place to a generous recognition of English valor. I think that, because the cheers were loud and true when I told them so.

COLLEGES AND ALIENS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The article by Mr. Ravage in the Magazine Section of the Sunday Times with the title "To Educate Foreign Colonies Out of Existence" recommends a very practical means of assimilation, but for a necessarily limited number of foreign young men and women. So small a percentage of our foreign-born young people could take advantage of such a plan, especially with Mr. Ravage's provision that not more than half a dozen foreign students be admitted into any given institution, that it could not bring about the result which is so optimistically claimed in the title of the article. The subject matter of the article, however, furnishes much food for thought.

As a matter of fact, it is highly probable that the majority of our colleges, small and large, have many more than six foreign students at this moment and have been receiving such students for a number of years.

It is true that many of these foreign-born students have come to America with the express purpose of entering an American college, so they would not be in the group which Mr. Ravage has in mind, but it is also true that a far greater number of ambitious foreign-born young men and women are now passing through our colleges after having earned in this country the money to enable them to do so.

The suggestion of Mr. Ravage that provision be made as part of our national Americanization program to enable and encourage foreign-born students to enter a selected group of colleges seems a wise one.

There are many indications that there are great intellectual unrest and hunger among our foreign-born young people and a desire to get something more from America than the dollars which they have been able to earn rather easily during the war period. I am in touch with many groups of foreign-born young women, and I draw my deductions chiefly from them.

Within the last few months many young women have expressed to me or my associates a desire to stop working and to study. They are young women who came to the United States after they were 16 years of age and began at once to support themselves, and who were obliged to pick up English from their fellow-workers or acquire what they could in evening school classes. Their English is therefore not of a kind or quality to open college doors for them. Their ambitions are enchained by their educational limitations. The evening courses which are open to them in the schools and other institutions in the city do not satisfy them. They want to stop working and to go away somewhere and devote themselves to study.

I have in mind one eager young Ukrainian girl who, with a light shining in her bright brown eyes, said, "I want to learn everything—languages, music, domestic science, American history—so that I can lead and teach my own people." I think of Russian, Polish, and Scandinavian young women who have expressed themselves in much the same way. In any national Americanization program the needs of this group should be considered.

I am sure it would be to the infinite advantage of such students to study in colleges where the majority of their fellow-students were of American birth, so that a complete adjustment to American life might take place, but I would not care to see any of my own foreign-born friends completely Americanized. I would not desire them to lose their peculiar charm and originality.

The introduction of a group of such students into an American college would do much to broaden the interests and knowledge of the other students, and the results would be mutually beneficial.

Undoubtedly the spiritual and social revolt which is spreading through the teaching of the Bolsheviki is developing an intellectual excitement and unrest, especially in the minds of young foreign-born working women who live in lonely isolation with few understanding friends. For this reason so many are craving and needing wholesome intellectual food and mental stimulation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is peace unconstitutional? That seems to be the question. Peace can be made only by treaty. Treaties are binding upon honorable nations. Making peace binds a nation not to make war. Is such action on the part of the United States an infringement on the war-making power of Congress under the Constitution? If so we can never make peace with Germany without first amending the Constitution.

There is no difference in this respect between a separate treaty of peace with Germany and a League of Nations. A breach of the Constitution cannot be justified on the ground that it was "such a little one."

If you can make a peace treaty with one nation you can make one with a dozen—or with all the world. If you cannot make a peace treaty on a large scale neither can you make it on a small scale Either peace is Constitutional or it isn't. There is no middle ground.

APRIL MOODS.

  Damp it was, the skies were gray,
And I wore some ancient clothes,
  Treasured 'gainst a rainy day.
    April mock obeisance made—
    Laughed at me, the saucy jade!

Waved her fairy wand, and, lo,
Threatening clouds were chased away—
  Soon the sun shone brightly through.
    I, in well-worn garments clad,
    Truth to tell—felt passing mad!

Still another day we met;
  Since 'twas lovely Springlike weather,
In my smartest suit and hat
  Wreathed 'round with a fluffy feather,
    Sauntered I, to pay a call,
    April vowed my pride must fall!

In a trice she hid the sun,
  With her magic brought the rain,
  Evidence, you see, is plain—
    April's like a woman ever,
    Full of moods—and steadfast never!

The net estate after the deduction of debts, funeral expenses, and commissions of $2,887,098 is $37,451,561. The State inheritance tax will be $1,381.561. The only stocks found to be worthless were shares of the Automatic Electric Co., the New Theatre Association, and the Theatre des Champs Elysees, Paris.

The largest bond holdings were $420,750 Chicago & Alton, $418,880 Morris & Essex Railroad, $382,200 Equitable Office Building 5s, and $672,800 U. S. Realty & Improvement Co. 5s.

Mr. Stillman divided his paintings, works of art, silver and household effects equally among his five children, Mrs. William G. Rockefeller, Mrs. Percy A. Rockefeller, James A. Stillman, Charles Chauncey Stillman and Dr. Ernest G. Stillman. The executors had power to make an unequal distribution but this was not done. A trust fund of $3,500,000 was left to each of the daughters, which after the deduction of trustees' commissions left $3,394,430.

The residuary estate was divided into three trusts for the three sons, and they are found to be worth $9,694,571 each by Appraiser William J. Campbell. Upon the death of each son his share is divided into separate trusts for his children, and on their deaths the principal goes absolutely to their children. While it is thus planned to hold the entire estate together for two generations, the executors have power to make advances of one-fifth to the grandchildren at the ages of 25, 30 and 35 years and at 40 years the whole or any part of the fund may be turned over.

Mr. Stillman named his brother, Charles, his sons James A. and Charles C. Stillman and his legal adviser, John W. Sterling as trustees and when the latter survived only five months, Dr. Ernest G. Stillman, another son, was appointed in his place. The trustees are authorized to retain the testator's property in the same form of investment as existed when he died and if they make new investments they are not to take more than $250,000 of any one except for reasons which appeal to them as especially strong.

TELLS NEEDS OF JUDAISM.

Rabbi Lefkowitz Says There Should Be More Religious Education.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 4.—Need for more religious education in synagogues and Jewish Sabbath schools of the United States was pointed out by Rabbi David Lefkowitz, Dayton, Ohio, in an address on "Religious Education and the Future of American Judaism" at the convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis at the Hebrew Union College today. Altered conditions, due to the war, demand more frequent services, and more efficiency among instructors in Jewish Sabbath schools, Rabbi Lefkowitz said.

"The customary Sunday morning services in synagogues must be supplemented by services on Saturday morning, and in some communities by midweek services," he said. "These services also might be lengthened. By some means, the nature of which can be left to the leaders of Jewish congregations, the demands of Judaism must be placed more thoroughly before the people."

Affiliation of Jewish Sabbath schools throughout the United States was suggested in a report submitted by the Jewish Educational Committee. Such a unification would enable Sabbath schools to study their common needs, and they would be in a better position to fill them, it was said. A session of the convention was held at Reading Road Temple tonight, at which addresses were made by Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, son of Isaac M. Wise, in whose honor the convention is being held, and by Rabbi Louis J. Kopald, Buffalo, N. Y. Graduation exercises of Hebrew Union College, at which eight men are to receive degrees of Rabbi, will feature the convention tomorrow.

27TH VETERAN RE-ENLISTS.

James Edward Boese Rejoins Army Immediately After Discharge.

The 27th Division gave its first recruit to the new volunteer army for overseas service yesterday in the person of Private James Edward Boese, who was discharged on Thursday from the 105th Field Artillery, Battery A. Boese walked into the recruiting headquarters, 461 Eighth Avenue, yesterday afternoon and told Major Cochran that he wanted to re-enlist at once, "to see more of Europe." That he will be sent abroad with the 50,000 volunteers now being sought by the army is assured by War Department orders governing the raising of the volunteer force. Boese's home is at 280 East 166th Street, the Bronx.

The recruiting officers said that they were glad to get veterans of Boese's calibre, for in examining his discharge papers they found "excellent" after the list of the soldier's qualifications, and also discovered that he had been in the service since October, 1917, and had taken part in the following battles and engagements: St. Mihiel, Forges Creek, Sevry, Vilosnes, Consenvaye, Reville Etraye, Cripion, Hills 378-379, Cotes de Romagne, and Molmont. Boese left for the recruiting station at Fort Slocum last night to enter the new army, with the best wishes of the recruiting officers.

MUSTERED OUT AT 80.

French Octogenarian, "Dean of Pollus," Served Through War.

PARIS, March 27, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—After serving four years and a half in dugouts and billets as a sapper in an engineer regiment, Lieutenant Surugue, 80 years old, was mustered out of the service a few weeks ago. When the war broke out, in 1914, he volunteered for the duration of the struggle and during the conflict earned the sobriquet of "The Dean of the Pollus."

After being accepted in the army, Lieutenant Surugue served in a training camp, learning the manual of the rifle and bayonet. When he had sufficiently advanced he was immediately sent to the front and during the war passed most of the time near Souchez, where shells fell with constant regularity.

He is at present in fine health and tuned to continue the campaign should occasion demand it.

"Monsieur Clemenceau is not, as stated by Mr. Lloyd George, 'the grand young man of France,' says La Liberté. "This title belongs incontestably to Lieutenant Surugue. Our Premier can grant it to him; there is, indeed, enough of most glorious honor for him."

PLAN HOME BRIDAL FOR MISS CARNEGIE

WEDDING SET FOR APRIL 22

Will Be Quiet Ceremony, Owing to Father's Health—Fiance Drove Ambulance in France.

Miss Margaret Carnegie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, and Ensign Roswell Miller of the Naval Reserve, whose engagement was announced last November, obtained their license to wed yesterday at the Marriage License Bureau in the Municipal Building. Their wedding will take place on April 22, at the home of the bride's parents, 2 East Ninety-first Street.

The young pair called at the bureau in the morning a few minutes before it had opened, and instead of going to the private office of City Clerk Scully, they took their place among the waiting applicants, being third in line. They filled out their application blanks, and later the oaths were administered in the large waiting room of the bureau. Ensign Miller wore his uniform, and Miss Carnegie was gowned in quiet taste, no one but the clerk being aware that the young woman was one of America's greatest heiresses. Their license was No. 8,136.

The affidavit stated that Miss Carnegie is 22 years old and was born in New York City. Her mother's maiden name was given as Louise Whitfield. Ensign Miller gave his age as 24. He is the son of the late Roswell Miller, onetime President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company. The young man was born in Chicago. His mother, who was formerly Mary Louise Roberts, now lives at 969 Park Avenue, this city.

Later in the day, at Miss Carnegie's home, it was said that no plans for the wedding were ready for announcement, except that it was to be a quiet home event.

Miss Carnegie's engagement was announced on Nov. 28 last, a few days after her father celebrated his 83d birthday. She was graduated from Miss Spence's School in May, 1916, and was formally presented to society in December of the same year. Since that time she has given much of her time to philanthropic work, and is Vice President of the Armstrong League, which aids dependent races such as the Indian and the negro. Since the United States entered the war she has also been active in war relief work, in which service she has often been associated with Ensign Miller's sister, Miss Dorothy Miller.

Ensign Miller, early in the war, joined the American Ambulance Corps and went to France. When this country entered the war, he enlisted in the navy and trained at Columbia University for a commission. After winning his commission as ensign, he was assigned to Squadron 11 of the submarine chasers, and was sent to the naval station at Bensonhurst, L. I.

HARRISON NAMES FIANCEE.

Miss Wrentmore's Mother, However, Said to Oppose Her Marriage.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Francis Burton Harrison, returning to Washington after some days in New York and a hunting trip in the South, confirmed today the story of his engagement and expected marriage during his present leave. His fiancée, Miss Bertha Wrentmore, is the daughter of Dean Clarence G. Wrentmore of the engineering department of the University of the Philippines. Mrs. Wrentmore and her daughter recently returned to the United States and are now in California.

No date has been fixed for the wedding, and Mrs. Wrentmore was today quoted in dispatches from the West as opposing the marriage on the ground of disparity of age between her daughter and Governor General Harrison.

Ferrari-Fontana Still Permitted by Court to See Child.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 4.—It became known today at the White Plains Court House that Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins had granted an interlocutory degree of divorce to Mrs. Margaret Fontana, known on the stage as Madame Matzenauer, from her husband, Captain Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana of the Italian army. The plaintiff was represented by the law firm of Riegelman, Carus, Levintritt & Goetz. Justice Tompkins ordered the testimony sealed.

The pair were married on June 26, 1912, at Buenos Aires, and have one child, Adriana, now 5 years old. The papers in the divorce were served on the defendant at the Hotel Ansonia while he was appearing as tenor with the Metropolitan Opera Company, of which his former wife is still a member. The court gave her the custody of their daughter, with provision for the husband to see the child frequently.

Chamberlain of San Antonio, Texas, was adjourned until Saturday, the defense having not been able to obtain a handwriting expert. Two character witnesses were examined today, W. S. JURY CLEARS MOTORMAN.

Dismisses Homicide Complaint and Assails Service Board Employes.

The Bronx County Grand Jury filed with Justice Richard H. Mitchell of the Bronx County Supreme Court yesterday a presentment criticising two employes of the Public Service Commission and dismissing a complaint for homicide against Albert P. Vogt, a motorman, employed by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. There was a rear-end collision on the Third Avenue Elevated road at 174th Street on the evening of Jan. 30 which resulted in the death of Elizabeth Graff.

The motorman was charged with culpable negligence, and held for the action of the Grand Jury. Two of the witnesses before the Grand Jury yesterday were V. A. Keffer and P. J. Boylan, of whom the Grand Jury in its presentment said:

"In the hearing of the case before this body there appeared two witnesses. In the report of the witness Keffer to his superior officer in the Public Service Commission he stated: 'It is the opinion of the writer that the motorman used poor judgment, as he picked up too much steam and could not stop in time to avoid the collision.' The witness Boylan stated in his report to the Public Service Commission: 'In the writer's opinion this collision is due entirely to carelessness on the part of the motorman of the colliding train.'

"The witness Keffer was employed as equipment inspector and Boylan as electrical engineer. From the testimony given by Keffer it appears that he is incompetent to discharge the duties of the position he holds, and he displayed ignorance of the facts he was sent to investigate. There is no evidence to warrant his findings as above set forth.

"It further appears that Boylan made an examination of the cars about fifteen hours after the cars had been removed to the yards of the railroad company from the scene of the accident, and there is no evidence to warrant the findings as above stated."

FORESEE NO LOWER PRICES.

Business Men Urged to Stabilize Trade on Present Basis.

Prices will never return to the pre-war levels, and manufacturers and retail merchants who are waiting to buy low-priced raw materials or cheaper goods will find that they are out of business, was re-echoed last night by all the speakers at a dinner given by the New York Business Publishers' Association and the National Prosperity Campaign to representatives of 200 trade papers at the Automobile Club.

"The cost of living," said Franklin T. Miller, Chief of the Division of Public Works and Construction of the Labor Department, "has gone up in four years 65 per cent. throughout the country and 75 per cent. in New York City. I have talked to many men in the business and financial world and they all believe that prices will not find a much lower level.

"Eugene Mayer, Chairman of the War Finance Corporation, told me that he believed prices, at most, will not recede more than 20 per cent. in the next three years. Business men in general do not realize that the world has turned upside down in less than five years. In spite of this we are in a very comfortable position compared to the position we found ourselves in after the civil war."

A paper was read for the National Prosperity Campaign, urging dealers and manufacturers to get together and stabilize their prices. The paper pointed out that this would establish confidence in prices, and do away with the halting of business.

One was her husband, the other—

SHE belonged to Sim Gage. She came to him freely, though in desperation—a beautiful, high bred girl, suddenly stricken blind, without family or funds, thinking, hoping, praying that he might be endurable, if no more. Between the poor, uncouth rancher and Doctor Barnes, soldier and gentleman, the girl sensed the difference and knew the mistake she had made. What could she do, helpless as she was? Could she expect Sim to know the revulsion she felt for him and to respect her feelings? Wasn't she his wife?

How the girl and the two men—all of them big, brave and honorable—work out their destinies is told by Emerson Hough, the distinguished American novelist, in the greatest of all his great books—

The SAGEBRUSHER by Emerson Hough

And around her, constantly, menacingly, are the forces of destruction, the vermin of Europe, seeking to cripple and to maim the only country where their miserable lives are safe. Even in her moments of darkest despair she feels the greater danger. But, so do Sim Gage and Doctor Barnes and those boys up at the dam . . . . . .

RICHARDS DEFEATS TILDEN FOR TITLE

MATCH TAKES FIVE SETS

Youthful Star and Philadelphian Win Doubles Laurels, Beating Alexander and Rosenbaum.

It is a unique tennis record that was established at the 7th Regiment Armory yesterday, when Vincent Richards, the sixteen-year-old prodigy of the courts, won the national indoor tournament in both singles and doubles, the latter in partnership with William T. Tilden, Jr., who took the second individual honors. Since this same pair already holds the outdoor doubles championship, young Richards is alredy the astonishing holder of three American senior titles, not to speak of the national boys' championship, which he has captured for two years.

The blond Yonkers boy yesterday made good all the extravagant claims that had been advanced for the superhuman quality of his tennis. His instinct for volleying and accurate placement is something amazing, and he has so greatly improved in service and defensive play that he may now be legitimately ranked with America's greatest. In defeating the mighty Tilden he has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that his temperament and brain power make him an ideal tournament contender.

Each Match Goes the Limit.

Both of yesterday's final matches went to five sets, the score in the singles being 3—6, 6—3, 6—8, 6—1, 6—4, while F. B. Alexander and Dr. William Rosenbaum succumbed at 6—4, 3—6, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1. In both matches also the playing was exceedingly streaky, with sensational rallies often followed by the most ludicrous of errors.

When Tilden and Richards took the court in the morning they acted more like a friendly warming-up party than rivals for a national championship. It would not be fair to the new titleholder to insinuate that Tilden might have won if he had wished. Yet for three sets the tall Philadelphian gave no indication of that fighting spirit which had carried him past Voshell and Frank Anderson. He was obviously pleased at the wonderful showing made by his partner, and at the finish he seemed genuinely enthusiastic over his own defeat. Since Tilden has been chiefly instrumental in the development of Richards during the last year, his pride in the achievement of his pupil may well be pardoned.

It was a strange match in the fact that service was broken through no less than nineteen times, which means practically four times to a set. This is against all the traditions of indoor tennis, where a single break in service has generally given a winning advantage if the contestants were evenly matched.

Throughout the first three sessions the tennis was unimpressive, although graceful and at intervals spectacular. The opening set had gone conventionally enough to Tilden, with only one break in service, due to errors. Two double faults and a very weak volley put the older player on the short end of the second set, but he at once equalized by his brilliant killing of the deep lobs sent over by Richards.

At this stage Tilden seemed strangely content to stay in the back court and engage in driving duels in which the youngster repeatedly outplaced him. A continuation of his forcing tactics, with a more vicious service, would apparently have given him the match in straight sets, for Richards's ground strokes had not yet acquired the deadly accuracy which eventually brought victory. Tilden threw away another service game by inability or unwillingness to go to the net, and though he later broke through again on the boy's errors, he handed back the advantage immediately when his technique as well as his court tactics failed to work. Richards promptly served a love game for the set, 6—3.

The boy threatened to take the third also, running into a lead of 5—3 on his opponent's errors, combined with some startling placements, particularly off his back-hand. But here Tilden braced and, by keeping up to the speed of which he is capable, brought the games to deuce and ultimately ran out the set, 8—6. Service lost no less than seven times during these fourteen games, which is probably, a record for first-class tennis.

Richards Tightens His Game.

After the usual rest, Richards began to play in a fashion that Tilden must have recognized as dangerous. His passing shots were behaving consistently well and his headwork was beyond criticism. The opening service game was Tilden's sole success in the set, the boy taking six straight in remarkable fashion, and squaring the match with the set score, 6—1.

Even then Tilden seemed the probable winner, for he was now set for his customary dramatic climax. But instead of going to pieces Richards grew better and better and more than held his own in every department of the game. He broke through Tilden's service in the sixth game, and was undismayed when the Philadelphian promptly broke through in return.

For two games service won again. Then Richards, leading at 5—4, faced a score of 40—0, with Tilden serving. With a series of marvellous placement shots he worked up to deuce. Twice he pulled back the 'vantage point, as Tilden threatened to square the set.

Then came his first opportunity to win the match, and only that one was needed. Catching Tilden squarely in the middle of the court, he coolly placed the ball in the far corner, and it was all over.

The afternoon doubles proved less interesting, except as they served to illustrate the extraordinary proficiency of the veteran Alexander in team play. This many-time champion outclassed all the other players on the court, and, with even ordinary support from Rosenbaum, would have won hands down, even against the splendid teamwork of Tilden and Richards. The doctor, however, had one of his dreariest off days, and messed up nearly everything he could reach. As the easiest of smashes and volleys sailed out of court or into the net, he lost his head completely, ran wildly all over his partner's territory, and continually handicapped his own service with double faults. Alexander bore up with wonderful pluck and patience, holding the national champions at bay for five sets, with dazzling drives, volleys, and smashes and scarcely an error to mar his record. Tilden and Richards were very tired toward the end, but resorted to high lobs and picked up the necessay points when the openings offered. They were never in real danger during the deciding set.

GARBAGE IS DISQUALIFIED.

BOWIE, Md., April 4.—The Expectation, the feature event on today's card at Prince George Park, was won by Dan Bright in an easy canter by four lengths. The Raymond entry was well ridden by Rice, who held his mount back in the early stages of the race and moved up slowly. Maloney had been making the pace, and raced Balaria into submission in the first six furlongs. Maloney was leading by a neck at the three-quarters, when Rice brought his mount along, and, as Maloney tired badly, Dan Bright won easily.

Garbage won the sixth race, but was disqualified, and first money went to Harwood. Doyle, in making the first turn on Garbage, crowded his entry so much on the field that there was a bad spill, Doctor Charcot, Manioc, Roederer, and Marianao going down in the scramble. Garbage got away to a good start and moved up to an early lead, and had no trouble winning easily after the spill at the first turn.

HERRMANN TAKES STAND.

Testifies in Federal League Baseball Suit.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Baseball history for thirty-five years was recounted today by August Herrmann, President of the National Commission, testifying in answer to unlawful monopoly charges against organized baseball made by the Baltimore Federal League Club in its suit for $900,000 damages resulting from the disbanding of the Federal League. He declared neither the American or National Leagues was operated for profit. In introducing Mr. Herrmann, George Wharton Pepper, counsel for the defense, recalling some of the accusations of the plaintiff, remarked, "face the jury, Mr. Herrmann, I want them to see what a pirate looks like."

Mr. Herrmann's testimony occupied most of the day in court. An earlier witness, William B. Ward, son of the late R. B. Ward, owner of the Brooklyn Federals, testified for the defendants. He corroborated evidence given previously that President Rasin of the Baltimore Club made the motion that the Federal League give full power to the committee of three selected to negotiate a peace pact with organized baseball.

BROOKLYN REGULARS WIN.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 4.—A six and one-half inning game, staged this afternoon between the Regulars and Colts at the Dodger's training camp, put Uncle Robbie's athletes on edge for tomorrow's contest against the Yankees. The Regulars won by a score of 4 to 3.

Goodbred and Mack Wheat were the battery for the Colts, while the Regulars used Jimmie Mains and Miller. Zack Wheat got his first workout of the year, playing left field for the Colts. The slugger was at bat three times, but failed to get a safe hit. He did, however, score a man from third by sending a grounder along the first-base line.

Jimmy Johnston is showing great improvement in his work around the initial sack. He made several splendid pickups in the game this afternoon. Zack Wheat will not start in tomorrow's contest, but may be called upon to fill the rôle of a pinch hitter. Sam Chestnut, the rookie infielder who joined the team last night, got his first workout today.

JOCKEY ROBINSON KILLED.

Three Other Riders Hurt in Spill at Bowie.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 4.—Frankie Robinson, America's premier jockey, is dead at the University Hospital here; Johnny McTaggart has two fractured ribs and Mooney and Sneidman are suffering from bruises and shaking up as the result of a spill in the sixth race today at Bowie. Robinson, under contract to Harry Payne Whitney, the New York millionaire, and the highest salaried rider in the United States, had a gaping hole torn in his skull.

The accident occurred when a field of eight horses dashed to the first turn in a race of a mile and twenty yards for 4-year-olds and a mix-up followed at the sharp turn.

GIANTS TAKE DUST OF RED SOX WAGON

Special to The New York Times.

TAMPA, April 4.—Playing their first game with a rival big league club this Spring, the Giants were trailed in the dust here today by the Boston Red Sox, champions of the baseball universe, in the first tilt of their seven-game series. The Red Sox took first blood by a score of 5 to 3.

Boston's kingpin, the mighty "Babe" Ruth, started the Giants on the sliding board. The famous fence buster can smack out home runs in Florida as well as on the Polo Grounds. First batter up in the second inning, he lashed one of George Smith's shoots far over a distant race track railing in right field. Natives here say it is the longest wallop ever made in Tampa. Ruth has knocked several balls over this fence in batting practice, but none so deep as today's drive.

George Smith and Jesse Winters pitched for the Giants, and McGraw got a lot of satisfaction out of the latter's work. It was Winters's real test against big league opposition, as he was sent to Kansas City last Spring before the Giants began their training series with Cleveland. The young Lieutenant acquitted himself with the coolness worthy of a former officer of the republic. In five innings the Red Sox got to him for only four hits, and the first time he faced Ruth he struck out Ed Barrow's terror.

The way Winters worked out of his first hole shows the grit in the young fellow. Before he had pitched five minutes he had the bases full and none out. He could not get a ball over for McInnis, and walked him on four straight balls. Vitt knocked a single off his glove, and on Scott's infield bounder, Winters obeyed Zimmerman's command to throw to third when there was not a chance to force McInnis at the bag. It looked as though Winters would quickly succumb to an avalanche of runs, but he tightened up in beautiful fashion.

Schang raised a sacrifice fly to Kauff, scoring McInnis, Vitt moving up to third. Scott tried to pull a delayed steal and was nailed by McCarty, while Fletcher caught Mays' line drive. Mays, who pitched the underhand ball, went five innings against the Giants. They had no trouble getting on base on him, but couldn't get the runs over once they got on base.

Herbert Pennock, the left hander, who pitched the game before the King of England last Fourth of July, succeeded Mays in the sixth inning. He had a good curve ball, but had trouble with his control. Boston did the best fielding and made several sensational fielding plays. Two catches by Strunk and Scott especially, 2were worthy of an honorable mention. Strunk cut off several New York runs in the fourth when he came in fast for Earl Smith's short fly behind second base, and doubled McCarty off that bag.

The Giants made a great effort to win in the ninth inning, but the rally filtered with Kauff. Fletcher opened with a single, took second on McCarty's out, and scored when Pennock threw wild on Thorpe's tap to the box. Burns walked and Pennock steadied long enough to strike out Young. Chase also walked, filling the bases. Only a single was needed to tie the score, but Kauff could not produce. He rolled to Shean for the exit out.

YANKS TRY SLIDING BASES.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 4.—Spring showers, which passed over this city both morning and afternoon failed to interrupt the daily practice of the Yankees today and Huggins put his men through two busy sessions. The usual game between Regulars and Yannigans was crossed off the schedule and in its place was substituted a long batting drill with sliding into second base as a follow-up after each drive.

Snore, Ferguson, Nelson and Brady did the pitching to the hitters. The first named cut loose occasionally with speed and showed an easy motion in his work which would indicate that his arm is rounding into good form. But he was very shy on control, due no doubt to the fact that he has not been pitching to the hitters as frequently as the other boxmen. Huggins told the big fellow to decide for himself when he had enough and Shore spent an unusually long time on the pitching peak.

Huggins planned several days ago to have a sliding pit installed at the ball park here but he finally has decided to let the players get their practice on the diamond. This afternoon the Yankee manager stationed himself at second base and went through the motions of an infielder catching the ball as the base runners dashed for second and hit the dirt. Huggins had to do some high jumping and lefty tumbling for some of his athletes as spikes were flying from all angles.

The Yankees meet the Dodgers tomorrow afternoon in the fourth game of their series. Mogridge is scheduled to pitch the first five innings and Russell will finish the game. Either Vick or Kane will be in Halas's place in the outfield.

SAYS PLAISTED IS COACH.

Mapes Explains Columbia Rowing Situation.

Charles Halstead Mapes, Chairman Columbia University Committee on Athletics, announced yesterday that Fred Plaisted and not E. J. Giannini is the official rowing coach at Columbia. In a signed statement Mr. Mapes said:

"So many contradictory reports have been published in reference to Mr. Giannini's connection with Columbia rowing that in justice to him an exact statement of facts should be made.

"Mr. Giannini has been engaged in business for the past four years and has given up professional coaching forever. For pure love of the sport and friendship for the Columbia management and without any remuneration whatsoever, he has consented to give as much of his spare time in the late afternoons as he can arrange, to help in the coaching this Spring, acting solely in an advisory capacity. Mr. Fred Plaisted is the official coach."

Maxwell—a car improved each day

More miles on tires

This is the underlying thought in every Maxwell.

It is why 300,000 Maxwells have been built on the original chassis plan. Each day this car grows better. Each day it is improved somewhere.

There never has been a radical change in design. There never has been a departure from the original idea.

Still there have been more than 1000 improvements made in this car since the first one was built.

Every time a chance was seen to make it better the improvement was made.

That's why a Maxwell runs on and on in almost endless mileage; why it grows better as it grows older; why it stands the moods of the careless driver.

No one has ever criticized the Maxwell on the grounds of reliability.

An Appeal for Tubercular Children in France.

The Edith Wharton Hospitals for Tubercular Women and Children have saved nearly ONE LIFE A DAY since they were opened.

The French authorities have requested Mrs. Wharton to increase the number of beds to 600. They offer to pay half the cost of upkeep and to take entire charge of the whole plant in two years, operating it wholly at the city expense.

Meantime QUICK ACTION is NECESSARY.

Is $100 too dear a price for a child's life? The cost of equipment for one bed is $400. The cost of upkeep of one bed for one year is $300. One bed will save 3 lives in 1 year.

A single payment of $1,000 will enable the donor to name a bed in perpetuity.

How Twenty-One Million Citizens Would Vote On A League of Nations

A Poll of Forty-Eight States

What is undoubtedly the most complete reflection of public opinion on the League of Nations which it is possible to make, is shown in THE LITERARY DIGEST for April 5th.

Assuming that newspaper editors all over the country watch the drift of public opinion in their districts, "The Digest" wrote to the editor of every daily newspaper in the United States asking his attitude toward "joining the proposed League of Nations." He was also asked to tell, if possible, the attitude of his community toward it. The response to this letter broke all records, 1,377 editors having replied, losing no time about it—even telegraphing. Many took the trouble to hunt up their editorials on the subject, clip them out, and send them along. The leading article in "The Digest" this week analyzes the result of the poll from different angles, by geographical divisions, by the number of people represented by the circulations of the newspapers (more than 21,000,000) etc. Many of the replies are picturesque, running the gamut of human emotion from "I don't think Mr. Wilson the last word in wisdom or the only American to be trusted," to the other extreme "we are with old Woodrow all the time—no deserters in this section."

Railroad Stocks Lead in General Price Recovery—Steel Sentiment Improves.

The forward tendency of stocks under speculative dealings received a fresh demonstration yesterday in the railroad share list which spread to the industrials and gave the market a generally strong appearance at the close. Traders felt better over the steel situation, and after a little irregularity in early dealings the steel company issues moved upward with considerable force. Steel common, as an example, regained nearly all the loss it suffered the day before. The leading explanation for the rise of the rails seemed to be merely the fact that buyers found offerings scarce, and after the constructive tendency had become defined short sellers of the last few weeks set out to retire their commitments. During the weeks of uncertainty over railway finances after Congress adjourned without making provision for future outlays it was noted that liquidation was negligible, and the moderate extent of reactions brought about by short sales worked to wear out the patience of bearish traders.

Confidence that the steel muddle would be solved in a few days—perhaps before the week ended—was evident in the stock market and to a certain degree among steel producers. The recovery of the general industrial list supported the impression of Thursday that while professional traders had been successful in unsettling quotations, the public had not been scared into disposing of either speculative or investment holdings. The Street possessed a vision no clearer yesterday than the day before of the actual situation in Washington in respect to railroad purchases, but overnight cogitation of the matter brought the feeling that the Railroad Administration and the Industrial Board would get together when sub-surface differences had been adjusted. This point of view was strengthened by information from steel making quarters which indicated that the men who agreed to the new price schedule would not consider additional formal slicing of prices and would, furthermore, take excellent care to see that the impelling influence for a change to an open market policy, with all its possibilities of sharp competition and attendant wage reductions, was not laid at their door. The attitude of the Railroad Administration to the steel rail price was made all the more confusing when it was recalled that the primary factor which caused the Steel Committee to consent to a fixed scale of minimum prices was the agreement by a representative of the Railroad Administration to undertake new buying of material for the carriers at the reduced prices. It is understood that this promise was made at the meeting of steel men and Government officials, under the auspices of the Industrial Board. The best that the financial community and the steel trade could make of the deadlock was that it resulted from interdepartmental friction and had only an indirect relation to the actual level of prices.

The sterling exchange market again moved upward with as great vigor as the day before. At $4.68¾ for cables the day's advance was 2½ cents, making the recovery 5 cents in two days and more than 9 cents in the last three days. By turning upward so rapidly the predictions heard a few days ago of rates to come lower than the recent minimum of $4.58 were completely upset, and the possibility of fresh governmental support supplied something for the market to ponder over. Franc rates were steady. In the Liberty bond market a recurrence of the demand for tax-exempt securities was evident in higher prices and municipal issues also showed a better tone than in some time past. Call money was in adequate supply at 4 per cent.

The New Haven Loan.

Information was circulated through the financial district yesterday to the effect that the loan of more than $43,000,000 made to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company about a year ago by the Railroad Administration, which was made to retire a similar amount of notes maturing at that time, will be renewed automatically when it falls due on April 15. It was also reported that the rate would remain at 6 per cent. New Haven has put a stop to all new construction work. As munitions plants in the territory which the New Haven taps have shut down, the road's returns have slumped proportionately.

Sold Out.

Brokers insist that the market is sold out, and point to their diminished loan accounts to substantiate their contention. They say if the market was not sold out there would be more stock in the Street and more people would be interested. Also, they stoutly maintain that stocks are the only commodity not suffering from "inflation." Stocks, they think, are deflated. From all of which they build up a bull argument which pleases them, at least, and if it does not convince all others, it is certainly attracting attention.

"Tax Exempt."

Distributing houses report an unusual demand for all sorts of tax-exempt securities. Municipals and State bonds are said to be about the only class of bonds now in demand, while some business is moving in Governments other than the several Liberty issues. The Liberties, incidentally, are also going very well, and for several days have displayed remarkable strength. Yesterday the first 4s and the first 4¼s were very strong, the former advancing about ⅝, while the latter went up about ⅛. A small issue put out by a Western city was oversubscribed several times on the first day of the offering. It was offered on a 5 per cent. basis and proved very attractive. Other issues of the same character have enjoyed similar success.

The Corn Market.

Reports reaching Wall Street from Chicago indicate that there is quite a "situation" in the corn market. The officers of the Board of Trade yesterday sent out an order for information concerning all open contracts in the May option, and it is said that official scrutiny of all operations will be undertaken for the time being. Corn has been advancing sensationally ever since the armistice was signed. Yesterday it jumped as much as 5 cents for some options. So much for the technical side. Other conditions have also been favoring an advance in corn. Acreage in some sections is being turned over to wheat production, and the corn crop may be smaller than required. There is a shortage of supplies on hand now and, altogether, a most interesting situation obtains.

Unlendable Funds.

Call money is becoming a drug on the market. Yesterday morning, when renewals were being arranged and most of the day's borrowings and lendings were in progress, it was said there was fully $10,000,000 more of lendable funds than could be absorbed by the brokers. Bankers explain the case by pointing to the approaching Victory Loan. They are accumulating funds for that operation, and meanwhile are seeking employment for the accumulation in the demand collateral market.

A Quick Recovery.

Steel common sold down 1⅝ points on Thursday and recovered 1⅝ points yesterday. This process of a forward movement one day neutralizing, practically, a decline of the preceding day, was used by students of speculative conditions to prove a contention that the real, underlying factors in the current market were not disturbed by the controversy at Washington over railroad buying of steel products. The way the entire market acted yesterday was believed to reflect a general belief that the full position of the Railroad Administration toward the new price schedule would be made clear in a day or so and would not be unfavorable for the early future of the steel market.

Minimum Rail Needs 2,000,000 Tons.

The need of the carriers for new rails, to designate a particular product, appears to have been underestimated in recent discussions of the steel market. One of the largest rail makers said yesterday that a minimum of 2,000,000 tons ought to be contracted for in the near future, for delivery before the year ends. This estimate, it was asserted, was based on information gathered from the railroad companies. The calculations presented in the financial district of late have called for a maximum of 2,000,000 tons, with a minimum of 1,500,000 tons.

Two Strong Specialties.

The scarcity of Barrett Company shares which became noticeable a week ago became pronounced yesterday when a turnover of not much more than 3,000 shares brought a net gain of 8 points. Another specialty which had been rather neglected until a few days ago and gained sharply yesterday was Owen Bottle Machine, with a rise of 4 points.

Marine and Sterling.

When President Franklin of International Mercantile Marine referred to the "exchange situation" as one of the factors which might be expected to operate against the success of a sale of his company's ships to a British syndicate, doubtless he had in mind the recent withdrawal of the "sterling peg," which allowed the rate on London to fall to a discount of about 5½ or 6 per cent. Naturally, in an operation involving $125,000,000, which was the figure most frequently heard in relation to the sale, a discount of 6 per cent. on the currency of the buyer is a serious consideration. It would mean adding $7,500,000 to the price. When sterling stood at $4.76½ for cables, the discount was only 2 per cent., which is to say $2,500,000 on the supposed sale price of Marine ships. Thus, since the pulling of the peg, an obstacle of $5,000,000 has been raised, along with others, against the much-discussed British syndicate.

Encouraging Stock Speculation.

If corn is to be "supervised" by the Governors of the Chicago Board of Trade, Wall Street hopes the Western speculators will turn to stocks for the "action" which is said to be the breath of life to them. It thinks it is beginning to detect some nibbling by Chicago, for some of the so-called wire houses have been rather unusually busy of late.

SEEKS REVISION OF ANTI-TRUST LAWS

Referendum by Commerce Chamber of U. S. Shows Overwhelming Majority for It.

FEDERAL CONTROL FAVORED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Reconsideration by Congress of all anti-trust legislation is recommended by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, as the result of its referendum vote of the business interests of the country represented in trade and commercial organizations. Complete returns from the referendum, made public tonight, show that the constituent membership of the Chamber votes in favor of all four proposals advanced by a special committee which studied the subject.

The proposals and the votes follow:

1. Congress should be asked immediately to consider the present situation of all statutes constituting our anti-trust legislation—for, 1,543; against, 51.
2. In reconsideration of existing anti-trust legislation there should be formulation of standards of general business conduct, to be administered by a supervisory body—for, 1,159; against, 389.
3. An enlarged Federal Trade Commission should be made the supervisory body—for, 1,102; against, 437.
4. In view of the importance of the functions of the Trade Commission as they would exist, the membership of the Federal Trade Commission should be increased to nine—for, 1,104; against, 422.

The committee's report and the results of the vote are considered significant, in view of the fact that the subject of anti-trust legislation will be taken up at the seventh annual meeting of the Chamber, to be held at St. Louis April 28 to May 1.

The committee drawing up the report is headed by Rush C. Butler of Chicago, Chairman. Other members are Silas B. Adams of Portland, Maine; William C. Coffin of Pittsburgh, William J. Dean of St. Paul, Alfred B. Koch of Toledo, William L. Saunders of New York, Henry R. Seager of New York, Alexander W. Smith of Atlanta, and I. C. White of Morgantown, W. Va.

New Problems Arising.

In connection with its recommendations the committee pointed out that there is special occasion for reconsideration of anti-trust legislation in the period of readjustment following the war.

"New and different economic problems," it said, "will arise for the control and solution of which existing legislation can scarcely be adequate. Many of these will be projected into the post-bellum period from the controls set up with official sanction during the war. Not all of these controls have been officially conducted; perhaps most frequently they have been arranged by the industries themselves and given official approval and official supervision."

A brief review by the committee of the history of anti-trust legislation since 1890 shows successive steps taken to control monopoly and agreements in restraint of trade and leads the committee to this declaration:

"Such a brief outline as has been presented indicates the immediate need, at a time when commerce and industry face new problems, for a restatement of our anti-trust legislation in a form that will be at once clear and comprehensive. At present there is an accumulation of twenty or more statutes resulting from about thirty years of legislation. Some of the provisions of those statutes involve difficulties which cause them to be seldom, if ever, invoked. An example is the section of the Sherman act which authorizes seizure and condemnation of goods. Even if it were conceded that in the course of some 180 proceedings which have been instituted by the Department of Justice the interpretation of the Sherman act has been established, later enactments have departed from the language of the Sherman act, and the new phrases leave great opportunity for perfectly honest doubt.

"This is a time which peculiarly necessitates certainty in our national policies affecting economic problems. If it was true, as the President said in 1914, that nothing then discouraged business enterprise like the necessity of running a risk of falling under the condemnation of the law before it is possible to make sure just what the law is, this discouragement operates with greatly increased effect at a time when the special concentration of business activity for the war is being succeeded by conditions which contain more uncertainties than have ever before existed."

Taking up one by one the questions that are put to vote the committee, dealing with the first, has this to say:

"In recent years different enactments have set up standards, have constituted regulatory bodies to administer these standards, and in some instances have affirmatively granted to these bodies power to approve agreements. To a further advance in this evolutionary legislation, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was formally committed by referendum in the early part of 1917.

"The organizations in the membership then voted that there should be remedial legislation to permit co-operative agreements, under Federal supervision, in industries which involve primary natural resources, on condition that the agreements tend to conserve the resources, to lessen accidents and to promote the public interest. The resources in question are timber, the ores and deposits of useful metals, and deposits of minerals which are sources of heat, light, and power. The supervision which is advocated would be in charge of the Federal Trade Commission.

Conservation of Resources.

"The proposal to which the Chamber is thus committed, with respect to natural resources, is in harmony with the principle which has been followed in enactments of the past five years, as above summarized. This principle should now receive wider application. Such a proposal as the Chamber advocates in connection with natural resources should be so broadened in its scope as to contemplate conservation of all of our economic resources.

"That prevention of waste in industrial and commercial activities—waste of labor, waste of executive direction, or waste of materials—is in the public interest will readily be admitted. Until recent years, however, there has been no way in which to afford assurances that the public advantage in measures taken to prevent waste would not be exceeded by disadvantages by reason of other effects of the means which were chosen. This difficulty has now been eliminated by reason of the experience we have had with agencies which administer standards of business conduct and have before them for their guidance the requirements of the public interest."

Respecting the recommendation that there should be formulated standards of general business conduct to be administered in the first instance by a supervisory body, the report gives examples of the applications of standards in a way which would accord with this regulation. It considers that the prohibition governing the interlocking of directors among corporations which are competitive should be modified by a provision that such interlocking might lawfully exist as to instances in which a regulatory body had made a prior determination that there would be no detriment to the public interest.

COTTON TRADING IS LIGHT.

The chief reason for yesterday's reaction in cotton, which was not much of a reaction, was the overbought technical position. Most of the news seemed to favor the bulls, but the bulls had had things too much their own way earlier in the week, and the market simply was overbought and had to readjust. The trading was not heavy and market interest was not as keen as it might have been. Furthermore, after the price level had fallen to its lowest, which was some 25 to 40 points under Thursday's closing, it recovered, so that by the end of business yesterday it was virtually where it had left off the day before.

Price changes on the session were generally confined to a range of a very few points. New May was down 15 points, which was the greatest change of the day in the whole active list. New July was down 7 points, and new October was down 3 points at the close. None of these options was ever more than 10 points above Thursday's closing prices, and the extreme loss for the day was in July, which sold off to 23.10, a decline of 35 points, so that the range for the whole five hours of yesterday's market was something less than half a cent a pound.

News developments were generally good and favorable to higher prices. Cold and wet weather was again reported over the belt, and a great deal was made of the movement to reduce acreage. Reports sent out by those who are behind this movement insist that the acreage put in this year will be fully one-third less than last year, and may amount to more.

Reports from abroad were considered less favorable than they have been recently, and the optimistic reports from Paris of peace by Easter were not considered as reflecting the actual situation. This, however, failed to make much impression on the market, and the other report from France—that import restrictions on cotton had been raised—also failed to create the sensation some had looked for.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

Annual Report Shows Decrease for Common Stock from 1917.

The pamphlet report of the National Lead Company for the year ended with Dec. 31, 1918, which has just been issued, shows net earnings after deductions for all expenses and reserves amounting to $4,692,815, which, after the deduction of $1,705,732 preferred dividends, is equivalent to 14.46 per cent. earned on the $20,655,400 common stock. In 1917 15.45 per cent. was earned. The surplus for year was $1,644,482, compared with $2,158,451 in the preceding year. Total surplus as of Dec. 31 last was $16,659,907 compared with $15,015,000 in December, 1917.

The report shows that the company set aside $1,000,000 in 1918 in a new fund called "promotion reserve," and Edward J. Cornish, President, in his remarks to stockholders, explained this item as follows:

"No small company with centralized stockholdings would embark in a new manufacturing business unless there was a reasonable expectation of very much larger profits than the National Lead Company seeks. Hence, it happens that every new invention, or discovery, or business idea in the line of our business naturally seeks a connection with the National Lead Company. Our extensive acquaintance with the consuming trade and reputation for reliability and conservatism make it possible for us to exploit new products most advantageously. The company, in addition to its research departments, which it maintains at great expense, frequently makes large investments in such development and promotion work. On the whole, such investments have been very profitable. With the installation of the custom of publishing consolidated reports it is considered desirable to create a promotion reserve for such purposes and to take up such losses as may occur. Some such losses we can now reasonably anticipate."

TO TEACH CHILDREN TO SAVE

A meeting of members of the Liberty Loan Committee and a number of leading educators for the purpose of determining upon a comprehensive and intensive campaign of thrift among school children was held at the Federal Reserve Bank yesterday. Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Reserve Bank, presided at the meeting, which resulted in the naming of two committees to take up different phases of the work. One committee will consider the matter from an economic viewpoint and is expected to recommend a course of action to the Treasury Department. On this committee Eugene E. Agger of the National City Bank was named chairman. His associates will be Professor E. R. A. Seligman of Columbia University, Professor Edwin A. Kemmerer of Princeton University, Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University, B. M. Anderson, Jr., of the National Bank of Commerce, H. C. Emery of the Guaranty Trust Company, A. W. Atwood, writer on economics for the Saturday Evening Post, and William B. Marsh, chief of the publicity division of the War Savings Committee, who will act as secretary.

The second commitee will devote itself to the educational phases. Professor W. H. Kilpatrick of Teachers' College was made chairman and is to have with him Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, Acting Commissioner of the New York State Board of Education; Calvin N. Kendall, New Jersey State Commissioner of Education, and Clarence F. Pritchard, manager of the School Bureau of the War Savings Committee, who will act as secretary.

Others at the conference included Pierre Jay, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank; Guy Emerson, Vice-Director of the Government Loan Organization and Director of War Savings; Vernon Munroe, Assistant Director of War Savings; Alexander Dana Noyes, financial editor of the New York Evening Post, and James Byrne of Byrne, Cutcheon & Taylor.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

A certain amount of irregularity is reported by the commercial agencies, but, on the whole, there is an optimistic note sounded and a marked improvement over some recent weeks recorded. In commenting upon the state of trade, Bradstreet's says: "More irregularity is shown in the general trade and industrial situation with a rather sharply defined difference in the tone of reports from purely distributive trade as opposed to those dealing with big primary lines such as iron, steel, coal, and kindred trades. In the former, despite weather irregularities such as rain and snowstorms, actual buying of Spring goods, men's wearing apparel, clothing, shoes, women's wear in general, millinery, implements and hardware, has expanded at many points. For this the early Spring, the advance of the Easter season, the flattering returns received by the agricultural community for surplus grains and animals, and the excellent Winter wheat crop and soil conditions in surplus producing regions seem mainly responsible."

Dun's Review considers the trade situation as follows: "While obstacles to the promotion of overseas commerce still exist, export prospects in some quarters have been appreciably enhanced by the further relaxation or removal of war-time restrictions, and new opportunities for the extension of American enterprise abroad are not infrequently making their appearance. With many domestic concerns that had been completely or largely engaged on Government work now turning to other channels of production, and with prices of some commodities at a less inflated position, the whole economic situation steadily assumes a more natural aspect, and the benefits are beginning to show in a business development which, while still gradual and checkered, promises to be the more lasting because it does not result from artificial stimulus."

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Thursday...5¼ per cent. for the best names.
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Consumer Ready to Spend Money.

In the bulletin issued yesterday by the National Association of Clothiers to retailers throughout the country, attention is called to the state of mind among consumers. It is stated that a more liberal spirit prevails among the people, a reaction from war restrictions, abetted by high wages. The consumer, the circular adds, will be ready with money to spend at current prices, and is going to expect full assortments. "He will expect to be met in the spirit of his renewed interest in merchandise."

Pumps Instead of Boots.

The representative of a leading women's shoe line yesterday expressed the opinion that, for the coming Fall, pump styles ought to sell better than boots. He based his idea on the price difference between the two articles. A low shoe, he said, can be bought for $5 and a pair of spats for $3 or $4. This would make the whole outfit come to about $9. Boots will retail from $12 up, some retailers asking a profit of dollar for dollar. The low shoe, combined with the spat, he remarked, is just as attractive to most women as a boot.

Fur Dealers Will Start School.

The Retail Fur Dealers' Association will meet in the auditorium of the Bush Terminal Sales Building next Monday evening. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the question of starting a school to teach wounded soldiers some of the operations of fur trimming and alteration so that a profitable way of making a living may be offered to them. The luxury tax on furs will also come up for discussion, and the dealers hope to clear up some of the confusion that exists on this subject in the trade.

Looking for Lower Prices.

Buyers of hosiery are still on the lookout for a price decline. When it comes they hope to build up stocks that are all but depleted. In the silk end, however, they are convinced in the majority of cases, it is said, that no drop is possible under present conditions. With the raw material constantly mounting and a real shortage of merchandise, manufacturers contend that silk hosiery is firm at present prices with an advance no unlikely prospect.

Lace Business Looking Up.

A distinct improvement in the position of laces and embroideries is told of in this market. As in many other kinds of merchandise, the best business is being done in the more expensive lines. Real laces are being taken well, from all accounts, especially real filets and real "Vals." There is also a demand reported for filet crochets. Stocks are said to be light generally, and the most-wanted laces are high in price. In the embroideries the bulk of the demand is said to be for novelties, in which a quite sizable business is being done. The forthcoming lace and embroidery week, which begins on April 26 and runs to May 2, is expected to stimulate largely the demand for these accessories.

Manufacturers in various textile lines who undertook war business are now in process of reconverting their machinery to industrial needs. This, it is said, will take some time, and in one industry the change will not be completed for at least a year. Another feature to operation on Government contracts, it was pointed out by a manufacturer, was the heavy breakage of machine parts. With the need for speeded up production and the knowledge that adjustments could probably be obtained for such losses, less care was taken of machinery with the result that many parts must be replaced. A rush demand for spare parts for textile machinery is noted and deliveries are considerably behind.

Dry Goods Exports Still Gaining.

A steady gain in the business being done in the export end of the local dry goods trade is reported. Practically all countries of the world, save those where Bolshevism rules, are now in the market for American merchandise. The week brought further business from China, and the outlook for the sale of American cottons in that market is said to be the brightest in several years. The West Indies continues to buy well, and the Latin-American countries also are "doing their bit" in this respect. Scandinavian buyers are among the most active of the Europeans, and there is also reported a good volume of inquiry from Greece. The shipping situation, while improving, still presents the main problem for this trade.

Buyers Are Holding Off.

Reports that come from leading secondary distributers of dress goods say that retailers are holding off somewhat in the purchasing of this merchandise for Fall, apparently preferring to come to this market to buy later in the year than to risk a further downward revision of prices in the meantime. In certain quarters of the trade it is admitted that the advance business taken for the coming season is behind that of last year in volume, but later buying is expected to more than offset this. Some wholesalers say they are satisfied to have the situation worked out in this way, and there is not the talk of a general scarcity of merchandise that was heard last year at this time. In the business that is now coming in from the road, fancy dress fabrics show up well. Among these, it was said yesterday, are tweeds, cheviots, and plaids.

The Shoe Demand Is Good.

The outlook in the shoe trade is regarded by well-posted manufacturers and wholesalers as the brightest in years, if not ever. Fall business booked to date on practically all lines of goods is ahead of that taken in the corresponding period last year, and Spring duplicates have been coming in well since the weather took a warmer turn. A feature of the Fall business being done in the higher priced shoes for men is the way retailers are taking models with pointed toes. Some of these are almost as narrow as the "toothpick" style the jokesmiths had fun with several years back. The price tendency is still upward. It is said that an advance of at least 5 cents a foot in the better calfskin leathers is in prospect. This, it is further asserted, may come in time to play a part in the shoes to be made up for Fall.

Gray Goods Buyers Fairly Active.

Gray goods buyers were fairly active in this market yesterday, but, as has been the case most of this week, more attention was given to such fabrics as sateens and twills than to sheetings or printcloths. The demand for the former cloths was large yesterday, but business in them was limited by the sold-up condition of the mills. The output of most producers of these goods is covered with orders as far ahead as July 1, and it is not as easy as it was to get business taken. The same is true of fine yarn goods to more or less extent. Sheetings were quiet yesterday, though among the sales were some additional lots of 5.50s at 8 cents for April delivery. In the printcloths business on Eastern 38½-inch 64-60s was done at 9¾ cents. The holding price for 39-inch 68-72s was 11 cents, but there was a well-credited report in the market that some spot Southern goods of this construction had been let out at 10¾ cents.

TO BOOST RUMANIAN TRADE.

Chamber of Commerce Organized Here by Export Interests.

Announcement was made yesterday that an American-Rumanian Chamber of Commerce had been formed in this city, with headquarters in the Woolworth Building. The Administrative Committee will consist of S. R. Berton of Berton, Griscom & Co.; S. B. Hunt, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; J. F. Lucey, Lucey Manufacturing Company; C. C. Orghidan, Rumanian Technical Company; E. P. Thomas, United States Steel Products Company; R. H. Ward, former Rumanian Consul General in London; T. Tileston Wells, Rumanian Consul in New York, and C. F. Moran. E. C. Porter will act as Executive Secretary.

The new organization will have for its purpose the stimulation of commercial and friendly relations between the two countries, and the Administrative Committee is made up of the representatives of American business interests which have already operated in Rumania, together with representatives of the Rumanian Government. It is planned, with Rumanian Government assistance, to open direct connections with Rumanian interests in Bucharest and Constanza.

Twenty-seven changes were shown in the foodstuffs this week. Seventeen of them were advances, and the bulk of the ten declines was in the minor articles. Flour did not change in this market, for the first time in several weeks, but a generally firmer tone was displayed in the leading provisions at Chicago. Live beef declined again. Mess pork also dropped, but higher prices were named for live hogs and sheep, and for Middle Western lard and short ribs.

The features of the dairy products were the sharp advances in the best butter and in fancy nearby eggs. The former gained 8¼ cents a pound during the week, and the State dairy grade, common to fair, gained a cent a pound. The best renovated butter, on the other hand, broke slightly in price. The best cheese declined a little, but the under grades were higher. Fancy nearby eggs showed the first advance in three or four weeks, and they went up 5 cents a dozen. They are now 12 cents a dozen above the corresponding 1918 price. The best Western stock did not change. The listed fresh fruits did not change, and the only fluctuation in the dried ones was a drop in California prunes. Onions dropped 50 cents a bag during the week, but this was the only decline in the vegetables listed. Cabbage moved up very sharply, and there was quite an advance in rutabaga turnips also. Potatoes were higher, while in the beans advances occurred on choice marrow, choice medium, choice pea, and choice red kidney stocks. The coffees and teas were again barren of changes, but in the spice list a rise in Cochin ginger was more than offset by declines in mace, cloves, nutmeg, and black and white Singapore peppers.

Ten declines and only one advance were shown in the combined list for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils. Features, aside from the break in quinine, were lacking. Grain prices were again steady to firmer, with the advances contributed by corn, rye, and malting barley. In the metals there were but three changes listed, they being a drop in pig aluminum and higher prices for lake and electrolytic coppers. All of the revisions in the hides were upward, and they included heavy native cows, No. 1 heavy cows, No. 1 buff, and No. 1 kip stock. Leathers were firmly sustained, and an advance was shown by tannery run, union backs.

Paint revisions were all downward and included English vermilion and American and F. P. R. S. zinc. Paper changes also were declines, lower prices being shown for M. F. book stock and chip boards. In the miscellaneous changes were lower prices for jute and resin, and higher ones for tallow and Chinese raw silk. Higher prices were shown in the burlaps at the close of the week, though this was due more to the active trading of last week than to buying during the current period. Cotton goods prices varied. Quite drastic cuts were made in certain domets and tickings in order to even off with the market, and standard bleached sheetings were pushed up slightly in some parts of the market. Gray goods prices were quite firmly sustained at the advances reached in the recent buying movement.

Critical buyers of Boys' Clothing will be interested in the opportunity offered by this sale because they are familiar with the excellence of the ABR. BAUMAN product.

This sale is held—and the merchandise is being sold—without reserve, because the firm of ABR. BAUMAN has been succeeded by the BAUMAN CLOTHING CORPORATION.

DEFINES TAX ON CLUB FEES.

Revenue Bureau Rules on Exemptions and Levy Under New Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Regulations relating to the tax on dues which became effective April 1, under the new revenue law, were issued today by the Internal Revenue Bureau. The law imposes a tax of 10 per cent. of the amount paid as dues or membership fees to any "social, athletic or sporting club or organization" provided that the regular dues of an "active resident annual member" of such club or organization are in excess of $10 a year.

A tax of 10 per cent. also is imposed on the amount paid as an initiation fee if that fee amounts to more than $10, or if the regular dues of an active member are in excess of $10. The purposes and activities of a club and not its name determine its character. Every organization having social, athletic, or sporting features is presumed to be included within the meaning of the act.

Any organization which maintains quarters or arranges periodical dinners or meetings, for the purpose of affording its membes an opportunity of congregating for social intercourse, is a "social club or organization," unless its social features are not a material purpose of the organization. The tax does not attach to dues or fees of a religious organization, singing society, chamber of commerce, commercial club, trade organization, or the like, merely because it has incidental social features; but, if the social features are a material purpose of the organization its dues are taxable.

Dues and fees paid to a "chapter" of a college fraternity are exempt from tax and also dues paid to a "local" of a labor union. No tax is assessed upon the amounts paid for life memberships to clubs or organizations, but each life member is required to pay annually at the time of payment of dues by active resident annual members a tax equivalent to the tax upon the amount paid by such member.

PORT UNION BALKS AT SEPARATE TERMS

REFUSE TO TOW COAL

Captains Will Not Move Craft of Private Owners Pending a Settlement with All the Strikers.

Although two of the striking harbor organizations have returned to work, the harbor workers who are still on strike made a show of strength yesterday when the Hoisting Engineers' Union rejected the offer of the private boat owners and the movement of coal in the harbor was impeded by the refusal of some of the railroad boat captains to tow coal boats.

Business Manager Alfred M. Sarrell, of the Hoisting Engineers' Union, said yesterday the vote to reject the proposal of the private boat owners had been unanimous. The vote was not on the merits of the proposal, which was for a straight increase of wages, but on the question whether the hoisting engineers should reach a settlement independently or through the Marine Workers' Affiliation. The tug boat captains, who have also had a proposal from the boat owners before them for several days, have refused to act on it.

Officials of the Railroad Administration denied yesterday that the captains of railroad tugboats had as a body refused to tow coalboats. It was stated that several railroad tugboats were towing coalboats, and that only in two cases had railroad tugboat captains refused flatly to haul the coalboats. These two captains have been suspended from duty, and the question of canceling their Federal licenses for violation of their agreement with the Government was under consideration, it was stated.

The railroad tugboats are manned by union men working under an agreement with the Railroad Administration, and the coalboats are manned by the tidewater boatmen, also union men, who recently arrived at an agreement with the private boat owners. The railroad boat captains have announced that their action was taken because they are not willing to allow the movement of harbor craft belonging to private boat owners while several organizations of harbor workers are still on strike against them.

James McGuire, President of the Lighter Captains' Union, said yesterday that he would make an effort at the meeting of his union tonight to induce the members of the union to reconsider their action in settling the strike by a separate agreement with the private boat owners.

Commissioner McStay of the Street Cleaning Department said yesterday that accumulated ashes and garbage were now being moved out to sea rapidly, and that conditions would be restored to normal in a few days.

FIGHT GARBAGE MENACE.

Dumping in Long Island City Stirs City Magistrate.

Arrests of dump inspectors of the Street Cleaning Department of Manhattan were advised by Magistrate John Koechendorfer in the Long Island City Police Court yesterday in order to prevent the dumping of garbage from Manhattan in vacant lots under the approach to the Queensboro Bridge. In an effort to relieve the situation in Manhattan, where the garbage is piling up because of the harbor strike, Street Cleaning Commissioner McStay entered into an agreement with Borough President Connolly of Queens to cart some of the garbage to the incinerator in Long Island City at Graham Avenue. The capacity of this incinerator is 100 tons a day, about one-fourth of which capacity is utilized for the destruction of garbage from the First Ward of Queens.

When the employes of Commissioner McStay began carting garbage to Long Island City they found that the seventy-five tons that could be disposed of in the incinerators was only a small portion of what they wanted destroyed. Agreements were then made with owners of marsh land under the bridge to have the material dumped on these lots. According to the general understanding only ashes and street sweepings were to be placed here. However, for the last three weeks garbage from the collection points at Seventy-third Street and the East River and Canal Street and the East River has been sent to Long Island City in large quantities. A condition has been created in the Ravenswood and Dutchkills districts which makes some neighborhoods almost uninhabitable. On complaint of citizens the police arrested the drivers of the dump carts. Six drivers were before Magistrate Kochendorfer yesterday.

"I agree with these drivers that they are not the responsible parties," said Magistrate Kochendorfer, addressing the policemen who made the arrests. "Go out and arrest all the inspectors of the Manhattan department who are directing these men. If necessary arrest even the Commissioner of the department. Bring them in here and I will send them to jail. I know what the conditions are and we will have an epidemic of the worst sort here as soon as the weather gets a little warmer if this thing is not stopped."

CHURCHES SHOW SMALL GAIN

Membership Increase for 1918 in U. S. Less Than Any Year This Century

The Christian Herald announced yesterday that the total increase in church membership in the United States in 1911 had been 284,599, the smallest gain shown in any year of this century. In an analysis of the church statistics Dr. H. K. Carroll attributes the smallness of the increase to the fact that so many young clergymen were away from their churches, serving as Chaplains in France or in some other war service.

The grand total of church members in the United States in 1918, including Jews and Theosophists, is given at 41,565,908. The largest increase was shown last year by the Baptists, who gained 128,328 members. The next largest gain was 78,463, by the Catholics. The membership of the largest churches is as follows: Catholics, 14,927,466; Methodists, 7,597,311; Baptists, 7,213,922; Lutherans, 2,443,812; Presbyterians, 2,259,358; Disciples of Christ, 1,511,160; Protestant Episcopal, 1,072,321. The largest falling off by any one church was a loss of 35,053 by the Disciples of Christ.

DROP CASE AGAINST SOVIET DEFENDER

SEES SITUATION CHANGED

Assistant District Attorney Barnes Makes Motion to Dismiss Disloyalty Charges.

Federal Judge Knox yesterday quashed the indictments charging John Reed and Abraham I. Shiplacoff, the Socialist leaders, and Dr. William J. Robinson and Samuel W. Simpson, editor and publisher respectively of the magazine, "A Voice in the Wilderness," with violating the espionage law. The motion was made by Assistant United States District Attorney Earl B. Barnes by direction, or with the consent of Attorney General Palmer. The reasons given were that the termination of hostilities had created a situation in which the ends of justice could not be especially served by placing the defendant on trial.

Reed, who is widely known as a Socialist writer and was at one time designated as Bolshevist consul to New York, and Shiplacoff, Socialist elected as Assemblyman, were indicted because of speeches made by them at a meeting of Russians under the auspices of the Socialist Party of the Bronx on Sept. 13, 1918. They were accused of having said that the sending of allied troops to Russia was an adventure of brigands. Shiplacoff, it was charged, referred to the soldiers as Hessians.

Both Reed and Shiplacoff denied any intention of reflecting upon our army or navy, and this denial is pointed out in the papers submitted to the court in order to indicate that a calmer and more patriotic mood had followed the excitement created among the Russians by the intervention of the Allies. Furthermore, Mr. Barnes said, it would be better to quash the indictment than to prosecute under it.

Dr. Robinson and Simpson were accused of publishing in September and October in their magazine a number of objectionable articles, some of them, it was alleged, being of a disloyal character and many of them referring to the army and navy in abusive terms. Mr. Barnes told the court that the Government had no evidence showing that the defendants were connected in any way with Germany or her allies, and that while the articles complained of were of a pacifist and defeatest character, and likely to interfere with the activity of those who read them in war preparations, both of the defendants had afterward recanted and urged their readers to support the Government.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—All prosecutions under the Espionage act begun during the war have been under review by the Department of Justice with a view to determining whether they shall be prosecuted further, investigated further, or dismissed.

It was said today that about 600 or 700 cases are being reviewed, of which a large number already have been ordered dismissed. Instructions are being sent to various District Attorneys daily.

Dismissal of the indictments against John Reed and Abraham I. Shiplacoff today in New York was said to be one result of the reviewing process. No general policy is involved, it was said, as each case is being considered on its merit.

Court Exonerates O'Neill, Lawyer.

During the controversy on Thursday between Federal Judge Mayer and Thomas J. O'Neill, counsel for Albert Paul Fricke, on trial for treason, the court directed that papers in contempt proceedings be prepared against Mr. O'Neill, and that his delay in the case should be subjected to action by the Bar Association. Later Judge Mayer directed the stenographer to expunge from the record all reference to the controversy, withdrew all orders directed against Mr. O'Neill, and warned the talesmen to disregard the matter. Mr. O'Neill's standing as a lawyer is therefore the same as it was before he appeared in court.

Black Tom Verdict of $413,391.

A jury in the Supreme Court in Jersey City returned a verdict last night awarding $413,391.30 to B. H. Howell, Son & Co. of 129 Front Street, Manhattan, in their suit against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company for sugar destroyed in the Black Tom explosion on July 30, 1916. The sugar was in one of the railroad's warehouses.

TELLS OF WILKINS'S HABITS.

Housekeeper Makes Statement to District Attorney's Office.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 4.—Affidavits divulging their knowledge of the character and habits of Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins were made in the District Attorney's office here today by Mrs. Theda P. Zabrotsky and Miss Mary Murphy, both of whom live at 412 West Fifty-fourth Street, Manhattan. The content of the documents was not made public.

Mrs. Zabrotsky was housekeeper in the Wilkins home at 164 West Sixty-fifth Street, Manhattan, from Jan. 8 to Feb. 14 of this year. Miss Murphy was a tenant in the house. Mrs. Zabrotsky recently declared to investigators that Dr. Wilkins used to wear a salt and pepper suit with a greenish stripe. This is the description of a suit brought to Joseph Jacobson, Manhattan tailor, by Dr. Wilkins for the purpose of having it cleaned, according to the story told by Jacobson, who said there were stains which might have been blood upon the suit. Dr. Wilkins is said to have denied he owned such a suit. Search for it by detectives has not been successful. Miss Murphy has told members of the State Constabulary that Dr. Wilkins sometimes displayed a violent temper.

GIRL WIFE GETS DECREE.

Supreme Court Justice Benedict, in Brooklyn yesterday, granted to Mrs. Katie Wolf Hart, 19 years old, a decree of separation from her 87-year-old husband, James H. Hart, a retired jeweler, allowing the plaintiff alimony at the rate of $175 a month. It was also provided by the court that Mrs. Hart should occupy the house, 837 Monroe Street, where she now lives and which is owned by her husband, rent free. Justice Benedict directed that if Hart did not assent to this arrangement, and Mrs. Hart was obliged to live elsewhere, Hart should pay his wife $75 a month additional.

While disputing as to the amount of alimony to be awarded, Hart did not oppose the action for a separation. According to a statement made by Edmund L. Mooney, counsel for Mrs. Hart, the husband, Hart, has realty holdings valued at $360,000. The couple were married on May 8 last, after a brief courtship, and separated less than three weeks later. At the time she met Mr. Hart, the plaintiff was employed as a manicurist at $25 a week.

Putting The Drive Into a Business

You've seen it, time and time again. Businesses that run like a motor car with the brakes on. You can feel the drag.

And then, in contrast, a business that fairly leaps ahead, overcomes all obstacles and quickly speeds to remarkable success. This winning "drive" is what every man wants to get into his own business. But what furnishes this driving power?

Ideas!—say the most successful of all business men. Sales ideas that land orders in spite of hesitating buyers. Collection ideas that coax in money the minute it's due. Management ideas that insure a working force alert and eager to produce more. Ideas that keep a business forging ahead like a well-oiled machine.

And the easiest way to get ideas of this kind is from SYSTEM, the Magazine of Business!

Each month it brings you ideas that already have solved some other man's problem, that have straightened out business tangles, that have piled up satisfying profits. Take April SYSTEM—go through its pages as you would through a great department store. Choose as you like from its well-stocked counters just those ideas and plans your business needs today. In the April issue you will find:

Make Your Competitors Boost Your Sales

CERTAINLY it can be done. It has been done! A salesman of a hustling young company turned the trick, with the result that in two years the firm's business doubled and in the third year topped the million mark.

He had a real idea and it is handed on to you in the April SYSTEM under the title "Why We Sell More at High Prices," by C. O. Alexander, President of Alexander Bros.

This same firm has hit upon a lot of other wrinkles that will put ginger into the marketing methods of any business. It has never had a "comeback" from the dealer, and has capitalized the fact in such a way that when it entered the Boston field the jobber who is now one of their largest distributors closed the deal before he realized that no samples had been shown him.

Make Friends With the Trade Acceptance

MOST of us have only shaken hands with the Trade Acceptance so far. We ought to take it into the front office and make a friend of it.

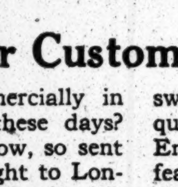
If you've ever been hampered by acting as banker for your customers—if you have ever lamented over the amount of money you had tied up at just the time you needed it for something special, you'll read and reread "More Business on the Same Capital," by William A. Law, Pres. of the First National Bank of Philadelphia, in the April issue of System. He tells just what the trade acceptance is, how to use it, how it helps in big and little business and how you're going to make more money because of it.

England—Our Customer and Competitor



WHAT'S what commercially in the British Isles these days? SYSTEM wanted to know, so sent its financial editor straight to London to get the facts. Is England a market for us? What will British firms buy? And do we need to fear them in the race for world-wide commerce? In the first of a series of articles appearing in the April System you'll find the answers to these and a dozen other questions. Just remember this, English business is neither to be feared nor disregarded. There is a big opportunity here for "hands across the sea" if you'll make the effort. John Bull is a customer and also a competitor. Handle with care! Find out what the English business man is thinking about you. It's well worth while.

"The Listening Post"

THE veteran realty man admitted that it was "bad business" not to pension off old Otis. "But I just haven't the heart to do it," he declared, and his decision won him the biggest deal he had swung in years.

The Borden tract was the finest melon in the local real estate field. Otis's chief and Cortwright, head of a rival firm, were both determined to sell it. When the buyer called on both firms it was old Otis that tipped the scales for his employer and clinched the sale. "The Listening Post"—a business story by Camillus Phillips—is in the April issue of SYSTEM. It will help your heart to help your head.

Wrong Methods Made Right

EVERY business has its wrong methods. How to find them and fix them is the everlasting job of the business man. The purchasing agent of a mail order house discovered that the combination envelope order blanks they had sent out were not being used. He investigated, and "doped" out a plan that resulted in a tidy increase in sales.

Broken promises hurt a firm's reputation and put a wet blanket on sales. A general manager devised a way of reminding employees of their promises at the proper time, and saved his firm the loss of many customers. These and other workable ideas are described in the section headed "Wrong Methods Made Right" in SYSTEM for April.

How the Other Fellow Got There

HOLD a mirror up to your own policies as you read the April SYSTEM. For instance, stand yourself up beside Frank M. Wicks. He will remind you of a powerful noiseless dynamo. He is the personification of speed without waste. Starting as an electrician in the Westinghouse rank and file he has remodelled every plant his firm owns along lines that he originated and developed. His methods can be applied to your business.

And consider the pet rule of A. A. Pitt, President of the Pitt Engineering Co., who says that a man is made up of 90 parts willingness and 10 parts ability. His knowledge of men stood him in a good stead when a union delegate tried to force a strike on him two years ago. George M. Verity of the American Rolling Mill Co. is a dreamer. By dreaming along the right lines and keeping his feet on the ground he boosted his company's sales from $281,181.12 to $23,000,000. Fellows like these are worth reading about. SYSTEM tells their stories.

Cash When You Need It

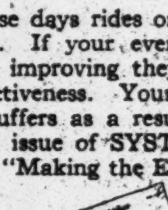
THERE are a thousand chances to make money if you've got money handy at the time. How to keep cash on hand is the question. There are five little rules that will keep a retailer in funds all the time. They lubricate the selling machine and keep profits going up. M. Windmueller tells the rules that made his business 11 times as large, in the April issue of SYSTEM. Look for "The Knack of Having Money When I Need It."

Putting the Handclasp in Your Letters

THE Ingersoll Watch folks have a way of making letters bring home the bacon. Every letter they mail is based on a scientific formula.

Every letter does what it's aimed to do: sells watches, wipes out misunderstandings, makes a friend of a debtor and at the same time prompts him to put a check in the return mail. Every letter is a handclasp and a friendly "Hello, there."

Business these days rides on the postage stamp. If your everyday letters are not improving they are losing in effectiveness. Your entire business suffers as a result.



In the April issue of SYSTEM, under the title "Making the Everyday Letters Better," Paul Kearney tells a score of first class, proved-out, better letter ideas. They are yours for the reading.

Making Borrowed Ideas Work

READY-TO-WEAR plans that can be applied to your business just as they are don't grow on every bush. But wherever you go, each experience you have contains the germ of an idea you could very likely use.

A certain Chicago hardware man traces an increase of 60% in his sales to applying borrowed ideas. As he tells it himself, "My biggest job is carrying a notebook. At least that is the part of my work that yields the biggest share of profits."

Into his notebook go ideas that other men have worked out or adapted. He gleans them everywhere. And in almost all of them is an idea that makes his organization run more smoothly and promotes his sales. One plan from a manufacturer perhaps, another from a wholesaler, rightly combined yields him a profit. Wallace J. Stebbins, of the Stebbins Hardware Co., tells in April SYSTEM what his notebook of borrowed ideas has done for his business.

Is This the Best Management Policy?

"HOW would Jesus run my business?" An odd question for a successful business man to ask, you'll agree. But Harry N. Clarke insisted upon getting an answer in the two businesses he is operating, and tells about his success in his article, "Is this the Best Management Policy?" in the April SYSTEM. Some of the plain precepts that Jesus gave men almost two thousand years ago can well be applied in everyday business affairs today. All religion aside, Clarke has proved that it pays to do it! There's something fundamental to this article. Read it and apply some of the ideas it contains.
